CHINA EXPECTS FRESH CLASHES WITH JAPANESE, BUT ASKS PEACE

EVACUATION OF HANKOW MADE IN SAFETY MOVE

First Month Of Struggle In Northeastern Hopeh Province Comes To End

SHANGHAI, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Japanese and Chinese diplomats tonight expressed hope that formal, declared war between their countries can be averted, but war fears still gripped central China and in the north formidable armies moved toward fresh collisions.

Hasty withdrawals of thousands of Japanese from widely separated parts of China reached a climax when the Japanese navy, under instructions from Tokyo, ordered complete abandonment of the Japanese concession at Hankow, great port and industrial center of the middle Yangtze valley.

Orders were issued for all Japanese in Hankow, including 400 marines and volunteers, to be aboard ships on the Yangtze river by noon Sunday, when it was expected the Japanese would abandon completely the concession which has been center of their trade in central China for a generation.

Even five Japanese naval vessels lying in the river were expected to withdraw. Administration of the area was to be turned over temporarily to Chinese officials.

Decides Her Child Will Have Better Home With Wealthier Family

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The weeping mother of baby Donald Horst surrendered him today to the woman who had cared for him since the day of his birth.

The dramatic four-day fight over the custody of the 31-month-old lad came to a sudden end with the announcement by Attorney John E. Johnson that Lydia Nelson had signed a document consenting to the adoption of the child by Mr. and Mrs. Otto Horst.

Miss Nelson collapsed in tears after affixing her signature to the paper.

Mrs. Horst offered her consolation, then commented:

"I'm so happy I am numb all over."

She said no money was involved in the agreement.

Johnson opined the settlement precluded a court battle over custody of the dark-eyed boy. He indicated formal adoption proceedings would be instituted in court Monday.

Meanwhile, little Donald remained in St. Vincent's orphanage, confined to his bed by a slight fever caused by this afternoon.

The infant was born to Miss Nelson and her common-law husband, John Regan, a machinist, on January 6, 1935. He was given to Mrs. Horst and her husband, part owner of a sound equipment company, 15 minutes after birth.

Last Tuesday he was carried away from the Horst home in an exclusive northwest side residential district by the Regans. The police first believed he had been kidnapped and the Regans had Assistant Prosecutor Crowley the next day they had snatched the

BRITAIN OUSTS 3 GERMAN WRITERS

Home Office Declines, Without Explanation, To Renew Labor Permits

LONDON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The British home office's order compelling three German newspaper correspondents to leave England tonight appeared likely to open a prolonged Anglo-German controversy. Two of the three already had been sent to Germany.

As Berlin dispatches told of German official threats of retaliation, there were indications the German embassy here was preparing for some action in the matter.

Two members of the embassy staff traveled by airplane to Renfrew, in Scotland, where the ambassador, Joachim von Ribbentrop, is on vacation. The correspondents' flight was understood to be the subject of a conference, and it was indicated when the two embassy members returned to London tomorrow the embassy would at last "ask for further information" concerning the home office order.

The home office declined, without explanation, to renew the labor permits of the German writers and they were given two weeks to wind up their personal affairs and leave the country.

The one remaining in London was

COOPERAGE PLANT WORKMAN KILLED

Louis J. Bohn Struck By One Of Flying Pieces Of Broken Flywheel

A big flywheel belt broke yesterday in the plant of the Louisville Cooperage company here, releasing a tremendous acceleration force upon the wheel, which, under the sudden strain, broke into pieces which were hurled with terrific force, one of them, a spoke, striking and instantly killing Louis Julius Bohn, 54, stove bolt checker.

Bohn was seated on a platform in the mill, 50 feet from the big wheel, eating his dinner at 11:35 a. m. when the accident took place, Coroner Irving J. Wolff reported. The flying spoke, weighing more than 100 pounds, struck him on the head, tearing off the top of his skull.

The spoke which struck Bohn was found about 78 feet from where the flywheel had been operating. Other parts of the wheel were found within a radius of several hundred feet from the mill. Some of the flying pieces tore holes in the sheet metal roof of the mill, while others were hurled

RICHLAND SCHOOL LEADER EXPIRES

E. E. Keebler, Parish Superintendent 25 Years, Dies At Home In Rayville

Eskridge Everett Keebler, 58, superintendent of Richland parish schools for 25 years, died at his home at Rayville Saturday at 4:15 p. m. He had been in failing health in recent months, and at one time, having suffered a stroke, received treatment at a hospital at Vicksburg, Miss.

Mr. Keebler, during his long service as the executive of the Richland parish school system, filled a noteworthy place in the civic life of the parish.

He was generally held in high esteem, as attested by the fact that at the time of his death he was serving his seventh consecutive four-year appointment in the office of superintendent of schools.

His death is mourned throughout Richland parish, not only by students of the schools, teachers, police jury members and civic leaders, but by the general public, many of whom, now in mature years or entering middle age, came under the influence of his character and leadership during their years of public school life.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Olive Baumgart Keebler; two daughters, Miss Sarah Faye Keebler of Rayville, and a sister, Mrs. W. B. Hall of Selma, Ala., who was born at Montgomery, Ala., and was a grandson of Bishop Nicholas Cobb, first Episcopal bishop of Alabama.

He came to Shreveport in 1897 as assistant to the president of the L. R. and N. railroad, now the Louisiana and Arkansas, but later engaged in

WORK STARTED ON $10,000,000 SPAN

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 7.—(AP)—A steam pile driver set in motion by a valve controlled by Governor Richard Leche formally began work today on construction of a $10,000,000 bridge across the Mississippi river just north of here.

Workmen have been busy for several weeks making preliminary preparations for actual construction. Today's ceremony signalled start of work on the bridge itself.

The ceremony was brief and there was no speech-making. Governor Leche, however, chatted with newspapermen, took occasion to express satisfaction at progress made so far by his administration.

"Well, we've started work on the New Orleans Charity hospital. We're building Louisiana State University into one of the best equipped universities in the country. Now we're getting the new bridge—now that's not so bad in a little more than a year."

A little later, the governor and his party, city officials and members of the Louisiana highway department, were on hand for a power launch and inspected work being done in mid-river piers which will support the main spans.

Clouded skies broke here and there with scattered local showers today in nearly every section beset by the sun, but "temperatures mostly above normal" were predicted for the next week throughout the eastern states.

Lewis Argues Bill Will Wipe Out Right Of One Judge To Safeguard People

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The historic court controversy in the Senate ended abruptly today with passage of a compromise judiciary reform bill dealing only with lower federal tribunals.

There was no roll call vote. Vice-President Garner gavels the measure through after less than an hour of perfunctory debate.

Few senators were on the floor when he banged his heavy mallet on the desk and declared the bill passed by unanimous consent.

Several senators, caught by surprise, sprang to their feet and protested that they wanted a chance to vote against the legislation.

Garner promptly ruled that their objections came too late but said they could have their opposition noted in the record.

The measure had been agreed to by administration leaders after they abandoned President Roosevelt's original proposal to appoint additional justices to the Supreme court of in-

COMPROMISE ON SUGAR DISCUSSED

Senate Bloc Leaders Hope To Work Out Way To Avoid Presidential Veto

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Senate sugar bloc leaders discussed today the possibility of a compromise on new sugar control legislation, with the hope of forestalling a threatened presidential veto.

Merchantmen of Italy and France also were targets for three unidentified planes in an area about 30 miles off the Algerian coast, and the captain of the Italian steamer, Franco Safari, died of wounds.

But Italian officials, evidently assuming that Spanish government planes made the attacks, took no action although they expressed keen indignation. The British and Italian vessels were not harmed.

British protest. A note to insurgent authorities at Palma, Majorca, was made after her consul-general at Algiers reported the bomb and machine gun attack "probably" was the work of anti-government aircraft.

REVISED COURT REFORM BILL PASSED BY SENATE

MOTHER GIVES UP

Lydia Nelson, the real mother of little Donald Horst, yesterday agreed to give up the child to his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Horst, from whom the baby was "kidnapped" last Tuesday. Miss Nelson said she was willing to surrender the lad because "I know the Horsts are financially able to take good care of him." In the above picture the little boy is shown trying, apparently without success, to introduce himself to his temporary playmates at an orphanage in Chicago where he was placed when a court fight loomed over his custody.

MANY TO ATTEND L. S. U. COURSE

Quachita Parish Farmers And Farm Women Will Go To Capital Monday

If WE WERE called upon to present our ideas of the 10 greatest living Americans, we most certainly would list the name of Mr. Booth Tarkington, a writing man of Indianapolis, Ind., and Kennebunkport, Me.

We would list Mr. Tarkington, not alone on past performance, but because at the jolly age of 63, and against the competition of millions of young men and women, to say nothing of those millions of middle years, he remains an active top-notcher.

His product is today as much in demand as ever. He is undoubtedly one of the three highest paid magazine short story writers in the world, and the magazines cannot get enough of him.

Only recently we came upon a fiction editor disconsolately eyeing a tall stack of story manuscripts on his desk, all tabbed for rejection, and delivering himself of a somewhat rueful soliloquy. It was to the effect that with the woods teeming with young folks trying to write fiction, the best fiction writer was a man nearing three-score and ten.

"And with a physical handicap on him, at that," the fiction editor said. He referred to an eye ailment that befell Mr. Tarkington some years ago, and that is said to still trouble him to some extent.

IT WAS SUGGESTED to the fiction editor that perhaps the situation was the tip-off, as the boys say, on the young writers.

"No," he said. "It's the tip-off on Tark. The young writers are all right, but he is just naturally a champion when it comes to putting words on paper in story form. And he has been a champion for over 30 years. Mighty few of them last that long up there on top."

A reporter looked in on Mr. Tarkington at his summer home in Kenne-

NO CLUES FOUND TO MISSING GIRL

Possibility She May Be Amnesia Victim Considered; Planned Swim

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Democrats considered the possibilities today that Doris Major, 27-year-old hotel cigarette girl missing a week, might be a victim of amnesia or had decided to go away for a rest as she had done before.

Friends of the tall, stately girl—called "Billie"—said she had been working long hours and found difficulty going to sleep. Police disclosed a note, timed at 5 a.m., last Sunday in which she told a friend she planned to swim in the Potomac river because she couldn't "make things go straight in my think machine."

Her friends also said the girl several times before had left the city without announcing either her plans or destination. She told a garage man from whom she had rented automobiles previously that she contemplated going to the mountains for a few days. She did not mention details of the trip.

Investigators found no clues to Miss Major's disappearance in the vicinity of the Potomac. She was an expert swimmer.

Her note, addressed to a daughter of the hotel orchestra member, said "think I'll drive on up the river (where it's quiet and the automobiles have brakes instead of horns) and swim around a little then pick up all the jumbled brains children and put them in the corner with their faces to the wall."

She said she expected to be back "before you get this—it's just in case."

GIRL'S HEROISM SAVES 3 PERSONS

Swims Mile Through Raging
Ocean To Obtain Help
For Companions

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Hurled from capsizing launch with three companions, 19-year-old Marjorie Murray swam through a mile of raging ocean early today and obtained assistance for a dramatic rescue of her friends.

She staggered unclad out of the surf at Far Rockaway and gasped out the story of a disabled motor and the capsizing to Albert Alspach, who was fishing on the beach. She had removed her water-logged beach pajamas, she said, to make swimming easier.

Alspach wrapped his sweater around her and led her to a police box, where they gave an alarm that brought out police and coast guard rescue boats.

One, a light police rowboat, pushed out through the surf about half a mile where faint cries were heard, and two of Miss Murray's companions, Arnold McClint, 19, and Helen McNiff, 19, were found clutching each other in the water, almost unconscious.

The police boat itself was starting to sink when the coast guard boat arrived and took on the two victims and their rescuers.

Meanwhile from the beach, lined with searchers operating powerful spotlights, the fourth victim, John Jancoski, 22, was sighted propelling himself through the waves on the splintered cabin of the wrecked boat. Rescuers waded through the surf to him.

The four had put out to sea several hours before from Edgemere, Long Island, in Jancoski's 27-foot cruiser.

The new span will be a part of the highway improvement program of United States route No. 80 between Clinton and Brandon through Jackson, giving two bridges across Pearl river into the city.

PREACHER HELD AFTER FARMER FATALLY SHOT

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 7.—(AP)—A school of public welfare administration will be established at Louisiana State university with the opening of the new session on September 13, Dr. James M. Smith, president of the university, announced today.

R. E. Arne, present deputy commissioner of the Louisiana state department of public welfare, will direct the school, Dr. Smith said.

The new course of instruction, Smith asserted, is designed to "meet the pressing needs of the social welfare department for trained personnel in carrying out the state's social security program, and, unlike social work schools now in operation, will emphasize training for public welfare work in rural areas."

Plans for the school were approved by the L. S. U. board of supervisors at its meeting on May 31.

Undergraduate and graduate courses will be offered the undergraduate division to be affiliated with the L. S. U. college of arts and sciences; the graduate, with the graduate school. Completion of two years of college work will be required for admission to the undergraduate division.

Some members of the state department of public welfare will serve on the faculty of the new school.

Arne is to remain with the state department as technical advisor and will act as coordinating officer between the school and the department. He holds a degree of Bachelor of Philosophy from Grinnell College. On April 1, he came here on a six-month leave of absence from the social security board in Washington to serve as deputy commissioner to the Louisiana

NO CLUES FOUND TO MISSING GIRL

Possibility She May Be Amnesia Victim Considered; Planned Swim

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Delegates considered the possibilities today that Doris Major, 27-year-old hotel cigarette girl missing a week, might be a victim of amnesia or had decided to go away for a rest as she had done before.

Friends of the tall, stately girl, called "Billie"—said she had been working long hours and found difficulty going to sleep. Follo disclosed a note, timed at 5 a.m., last Sunday in which she told a friend she planned to swim in the Potomac river because she couldn't "make things go straight in my think machine."

Her friends also said the girl several times before had left the city without announcing either her plans or destination. She told a garage man from whom she had rented automobiles previously that she contemplated going to the mountains for a few days. She did not mention details of the trip.

Investigators found no clues to Miss Major's disappearance in the vicinity of the Potomac. She was an expert swimmer.

Her note, addressed to a daughter of the hotel orchestra member, said "think I'll drive on up the river (where it's quiet and the automobiles have brakes instead of horns) and swim around a little then pick up all the jumbled brain children and put them in the corner with their faces to the wall."

She said she expected to be back "before you get this—it's just in case."

GIRL'S HEROISM SAVES 3 PERSONS

Swims Mile Through Raging
Ocean To Obtain Help
For Companions

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Hurled from a capsizing launch with three companions, 19-year-old Marjorie Murray swam through a mile of raging ocean early today and obtained assistance for a dramatic rescue of her friends.

She staggered unclad out of the surf at Far Rockaway and gasped out the story of a disabled motor and the capsizing to Albert Allspach, who was fishing on the beach. She had removed her water-logie beach pajamas, she said, to make swimming easier.

Allspach wrapped his sweater around her and led her to a police call box, where they gave an alarm that brought out police and coast guard rescue boats.

One a light police rowboat, pushed out through the surf about half a mile when faint cries were heard, and two of Miss Murray's companions, Arnold McCloat, 21, and Helen McNiff, 19, were found clutching each other in the water, almost unconscious.

The police boat itself was starting to sink when the coast guard boat arrived and took on the two victims and their rescuers.

Meanwhile, from the beach, lined with searchers operating powerful spotlights, the fourth victim, John Jancoski, 22, was sighted propelling himself through the waves on the splintered cabin of the wrecked launch. Rescuers waded through the surf to him.

PRICE BOOSTS ON AUTOS ANNOUNCED

Ford And All General Motors Divisions Go Up From $15 To $100

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—(P)—Higher price levels, long a topic of discussion in the motorcar industry, will become a reality over a large part of the industry next week and producers who have not announced price increases are expected to do so within the next few weeks.

The increases so far announced are by Ford and all General Motors divisions. They range from $15 to $100 and are said in informed sources to represent hardly half the increased cost of materials and higher wages to which they are generally attributed. In these same sources the prediction already is being ventured that a further advance will be made before the year-ends, or not long after the 1938 models are introduced.

Price advances have been under consideration since the beginning of the current year, but lacking knowledge of the Ford Motor company's plans, most producers have been reluctant to take the initial step in an upward revision. There was also the recurring report that Ford was working on a new cheaper model with which to effectuate his announced plan of demonstrating something new in competition and distribution.

Last week, however, Ford unexpectedly announced an upward revision of from $15 to $35 on most models. Shortly afterward Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of General Motors' board, announced that the increased cost of production and higher wage levels soon must be reflected in a "substantial" upward revision of retail prices.

SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE EXPECTED

Officials Predict Work To Be Resumed Monday In Plymouth Plant

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—(P)—Officials of the Plymouth Motor Car company and representatives of the United Automobile Workers of America announced a "basis of settlement" tonight which they predicted, would result in resumption of normal operations in the Plymouth plant Monday morning.

Details of the proposed settlement were not disclosed. It will be submitted to a ratification meeting of Plymouth employees who are members of the U. A. W. tomorrow.

The management, officials of the union and the negotiating committee have agreed on a basis of settlement which will be presented at a membership committee meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday for formal ratification," Richard T. Frankenstein, U. A. W. organizational worker, announced following a night conference.

"It is expected that the meeting will ratify the agreement and that all workers affected by the closing will return at their regular hours Monday."

Attorney Lester L. Colbert, counsel for the Chrysler corporation, Plymouth parent concern, said:

"We have agreed with the officers of the U. A. W. and the negotiating committee on a basis of settlement of the controversy at the Plymouth plant. If the settlement is approved by the members of the U. A. W., the Plymouth plant will go into full operations for all shifts on Monday."

RURAL CARRIERS TO MEET IN ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—(P)—More than 6,500 rural letter carriers will open their annual convention in this city August 17 and, aside from business sessions and banquets, the program so far arranged for them indicates they will spend a great deal of time on their feet.

The program of diversion includes sight-seeing tours of the French quarter, golfing, swimming, and balls.

The opening day's session will begin with an invocation by Archbishop Joseph Francis Ruinier and an address of welcome by Governor Richard W. Leche and acting Mayor Jess S. Cave.

Insurgent sources charged that street fighting between international volunteers and Spanish government militiamen was going on in Albacete and other important government centers as anarchist sought to overthrow the Valencia government.

Spanish government advisers asserted that an unnamed number of insurgents had fortified themselves in the ancient bishop's palace of Toledo and were waging a fierce fight against their former comrades in the insurgent-held city.

Heavy rifle fire could be heard from government positions close to the city as a throng of civilians began to flee, it was reported.

The permis were as follows: Union Oil mill, addition to plant, $2,000; R. C. Jolissaint, garage, $215; Flournoy corporation, sheet iron building, $1,020; R. L. White, four-room residence, $2,350; Jack Morrison, store building, $750; E. E. Eaves, addition to residence, $175.

REBELLIONS IN SPAIN REPORTED

Both Loyalists And Insurgents Claim Others Facing Internal Trouble

HENDAYNE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 7.—(P)—Both sides in the Spanish war reported today that armed rebellions had broken out within the ranks of their foes.

Frontal and flank attacks were threatening to press in Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's teruel salient, the commander said.

Attacking from south and west of the Albarracin sector of the Teruel front, loyalist infantry and artillery had forced the insurgents to retreat to newly won territory.

The government was said to have forced an insurgent withdrawal from the heights of Bezas, about 11 miles west of Teruel, by massing men and guns near the mountain village, Frias, with the threat of driving a wedge through the center of the insurgent front.

An insurgent communiqué said General Mijia would take over the command of the loyalist Aragon army.

Both men were estranged from their wives, officers said. The dead man was the father of a daughter besides his son, Greenlee, had no children.

Unprofitable Remorse

Many a person is eating out his heart with remorse. That is not as it should be. Remorse is not intended to eat out the heart.

Every feature of our world—physical, mental, spiritual—has its definite use and its skilful purpose if we could or would but realize it.

Remorse, distressful as it is, has its highly constructive uses. Remorse is a persistent, gnawing pain of the mind occasioned by a sense of guilt. The first purpose of remorse in the divine scheme of things is to awaken and quicken the conscience to realization of some transgression one has committed. The second purpose of remorse is to bring about a determination to make amends if possible and in any event to amend one's life that the same transgression may not be repeated.

Repentance, different from remorse, though it grows out of the same root, has the effect of reorganizing and improving the repentant one's life. That is the purpose and the use of repentance. But once repentance has come in, remorse should be put out. Once repentance is fact, remorse is no longer beneficial but harmful. Once repentance has begun to do its work, remorse should be persistently pushed out of the mind, for then it becomes destructive. It brings on melancholia, despair. It retards or even stops progress.

After a person has become thoroughly repentant he should not entertain remorse for the thing he has done, any more than he should keep on grinding a knife after its edge has been keen. Up to a certain stage the grinding of a knife is necessary and beneficial. Beyond that stage it is not only unnecessary but ruinous. Certain acids applied to metals under certain conditions produce a corrosive effect that is desirable; if the corrosion is too long continued it becomes injurious or destructive.

We should distinguish carefully and intelligently between remorse and repentance. When we find ourselves remorseful about something we have done, we should first decide whether we ought to be remorseful. After all, was the thing wrong? It is quite possible, you know, to be mistakenly remorseful—when there is no occasion for remorse. But if we decide we ought to be remorseful about an act and we suffer the pangs of contrition, we should recognize the purpose of such pangs. Namely, to arouse us to better behavior—to the determination to do better henceforth.

Once we are thoroughly repentant, and the determination to amend is adopted, remorse should be resolutely thrust out of the picture.

THIS GANGSTER WORLD

Every once in a while there pops up an odd little side-light on a changing world. The other day the New York papers recalled that it is just 25 years since Herman Rosenthal was murdered by gangsters.

Since that day there have been many gang murders. But the murder of Rosenthal is generally regarded as the first done in modern gang style. It inaugurated the era of the modern gang murder.

The odd thing is this: the term, gangster, was invented at that time by harassed New York newspapermen trying to find a short way to say "members of a gang."

What with the movies and the pulp magazines, not to speak of the newspapers, the word gangster must be one of the first words a tiny child learns these days. It seems odd to think that only 25 years ago there were people who had never heard the word, never faced the reality. So fast the whirling world spins 'round!

POLAND'S LAND NEED

History shows that many wars have begun over a nation's ambition for more land. Italy's adventure in Ethiopia affords the most effective and most recent illustration of that.

Now Poland is coming out with the hint that more land is needed to take care of its million jobless adults, the majority of whom exist precariously as excess baggage on small farms. And solution to the question has been placed in the hands of an emigration committee formed in the Polish parliament.

The only trouble with this idea is that practically all the habitable territory of the world is now independent or allocated definitely to some power. Poland's emigration committee, then, faces a stiff problem. And how that problem is solved without stepping on someone's toes will be interesting to see.

Politics should be banned during hot weather, according to one observer. But how can it be done when the politicians keep breaking out with summer rash?

After a few brief clashes in Spain, Mussolini's men have decided they would prefer to fight the Ethiopians, very few of whom have guns.

Astronomers announce the appearance of a new comet. Let's hope it doesn't mark the return of the one that caused the World war.

If the devil wished to test old Job's character, how strange that he didn't let him handle other people's money.

PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY AT WORK

Chemistry is one of the most fascinating fields of modern industrial activity. The ancient alchemist, compounding strange mixtures in his futile quest of the all-curing panacea and the transmutation of base metals into gold, little dreamed that he was preparing the way for one of the world's most useful industries.

Chemistry today is a swift-moving science re-shaping our everyday world. Research chemists, toiling in the laboratories of private manufacturers and great universities, are constantly bringing forth new developments that make life easier, happier, and more interesting for millions of people everywhere. Among the countless articles entering your daily life are many that all the money in the world could not have bought just a few years ago. They simply did not exist, for they had not yet emerged from the test tube.

Some of the most interesting and useful products of chemistry are the wonderful new substances produced from common materials which abound in nature. One example is the substance called pyroxylin, which is made from cellulose, the material forming the cell walls of plants and occurring almost everywhere on earth. Exploring the mysterious realms of atoms and molecules, chemists have discovered how to take plant cells apart and then put the material together again to make this entirely new substance.

Pyroxylin in transparent or colored form is molded into toiletries, pipes, stems, hair ornaments, toothbrush handles, and an endless list of other objects. Transparent sheets of it are sandwiched between two plates of glass to make shatter-proof safety glass. Other cellulose products are moving-picture films, improved finishes to take the place of paint and varnish, the transparent cellophane wrapping used so extensively in modern packaging, and rayon, the chemically made yarn.

Another outstanding service of the chemical industry is in the "fixation of atmospheric nitrogen." With air, water, coal, and electricity as his raw materials, the chemist manufactures nitrates, used in vast quantity for agricultural fertilizer and for many other purposes.

Coal tar in the hands of chemists has become a veritable gold mine. From this sticky, foul-smelling material are made sweet perfumes, flavoring extracts, medicinal drugs, gorgeously colored dyes, and innumerable other products touching nearly every other industry and affecting the lives of us all.

In these and many other ways, chemistry is at work in the service of industry. One of the oldest of sciences, it has achieved its most useful accomplishments under the sponsorship of business enterprise. Scientific skill has been linked with efficient manufacturing and modern merchandising.

Advertising has been an important factor in the development of the chemical industry, as it quickly makes new products known to the public and enables the manufacturer to produce in large quantity and sell at low cost.

The chemical industry has shown splendidly what results can be accomplished through practical cooperation between science and business management, when American enterprise is free to go ahead. Who knows, past miracles may seem as nothing when compared to the future wonders that will be created in test tube and factory.

A BOOK REVIEW

A DIFFERENT CONCEPT OF THE CIVIL WAR

With ever increasing volume, "literature" of the Civil war period pours forth on the country these days, in biography, in the thesis, the novel and the scenario. And for the most part the war of the states is passed over as the "irrepressible conflict."

But not so in the "Civil War and Reconstruction," by Professor J. G. Randall. Here at last is a writer wholly "unconvinced that the tragic conflict has been proved to be inevitable."

Professor of history at the University of Illinois, Dr. Randall has sought to focus the whole Civil war era in the light of new findings and many years of careful research.

He accepts the striking conflicts between the industrial north and the agrarian south. But "what is not so clear," he points out, "is that because of this agrarian-industrialist controversy, the Civil war was inescapable." From this point he proceeds to analyze the forces of those times.

He speaks, for instance, of the "professional patroonage, slogan-making, face-saving, political clamoring and propaganda existing on both sides."

Frankly, the book is no eulogy of Lincoln as a constitutional president, but neither does it charge Lincoln with dictatorship. It concludes more that while the constitution was stretched pretty much by the Civil war chief, it was not so subverted.

Passing over military and naval operations rather more hurriedly than have most writers on this era, Professor Randall devotes more space to the reconstruction movement. He concludes the term "reconstruction" is a misnomer and labels the period "one of the most deplorable in American annals." Failure of congress and president to agree on a reconstruction program was in a large measure the real cause of the imbroglio, he points out.

The book fills a long need as a research offering but it appears more noteworthy for the mistaken views it corrects and the prejudice and political partisanship it lifts from the whole picture.—P. G. F.

(Now That Mussolini And Chamberlain Are Corresponding—)

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—This isn't the entire secret history of the complete collapse of the Roosevelt supreme court plan. But it's an essential part of it.

The inside story begins with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. It was he who sold the spectacular plan to Roosevelt and persuaded Roosevelt it should be kept secret until popped, lest the sensational story be leaked.

The original draft of the Roosevelt message to congress on the plan was written by Cummings and Donald Richberg. Cummings had the bill written by a brilliant young lawyer who has been identified to your correspondent under oath of secrecy.

The department of justice had charge of liaison work with congress on the bill, the job being assigned to Assistant Attorney General Joe Keenan, who had to work with the late Senate Leader Joe Robinson. Robinson was dying. For four months he was on a buttermilk diet and often in agony. He wasn't enthusiastic about the bill and was wounded because he hadn't been consulted. In 10 years he had built up a personal organization, carrying all trades, debts and other data in his head. Other leaders didn't fight for the court plan because of apathy or because Joe insisted on doing the job himself.

Administration Handicapped

Senators had no one to talk to because Joe was ill so much of the time. The opposition was well-financed, backed by a great propaganda effort and aided by such shrewd old heads as Borah and Hiram Johnson.

The administration, unable to use party funds or—in most cases—party machinery, kept up its end with Roosevelt's radio speeches, efforts of cabinet members and behind-the-scenes efforts, although Judiciary Chairman Ashurst's "all or nothing" attitude grated on many nerves. The sit-down strikes and the wage-hour bill helped the opposition gain recruits, but the administration was doing fairly well until Justice Van Devanter's resignation.

After the court's favorable Wagner act and social security decisions, many advisers urged Roosevelt to put the court fight off to the end of the session and hold it as a Damoclean sword. They argued he had achieved his chief aim—liberalized decisions. After Van Devanter's resignation the pressure for holding the fight off and keeping the bill buried in committee became terrific.

Robinson's Handicap

But the Van Devanter resignation brought up Robinson's name and demands for his appointment to the court—a long-time ambition with Joe from all but the progressives. Roosevelt implied to Robinson that he couldn't put him in the court without adding a couple of liberals at the same time. Joe and many of his friends insisted on action.

And perhaps the high point of this story is the fact that about two months ago it would have been easy to pass a compromise bill adding one more judicial circuit to the nine now existing, making an 11 justice court, having the chief justice serve over all, with a justice from each circuit. This would have been satisfactory to Roosevelt, one is told.

But Robinson couldn't take that. Many years ago the circuits were 99 germy which includes Robinson's state of Arkansas also included Justice Pierce Butler's state of Minnesota. And Butler wasn't going to resign and Robinson couldn't go on to represent the eighth circuit.

Robinson insisted to the president he could get a bill satisfactory to Roosevelt if he could be allowed to handle it in his own way on a personal basis. And he could have. At one time he said he had 54 senators pledged to the Hatch amendment, which would have given Roosevelt three court appointments by January. He wouldn't have started the fight without assurance of 52.

Pledges Die With Joe

But Robinson died, and many of his pledges proved to be purely personal. They died with him. Among those who had promised Robinson were Andrews of Florida, Brown of Michigan, Bulow of South Dakota, and Russell of Georgia. These joined with Overton of Louisiana, Adams of Colorado, Herring of Iowa and Gillette of Iowa—all supposedly uncommitted—in a bloc to demand recommitment to the judiciary committee, which meant the bill's death.

Various associations of hay fever sufferers carefully chart different portions of the United States in which certain plants causing hay fever are present. Thus a person who happens to be sensitive to plantain, sorrel, mountain cedar, or a rat-tail, may learn whether he may safely go to any certain portion of the country.

If, however, the person happens to be sensitive to some other substance which occurs at all seasons of the year in practically all portions of the civilized world, he has little chance for cure of hay fever unless he can be desensitized.

In Washington he promised Roosevelt he would get the best possible compromise if authorized to deal with the senate. He also asked Roosevelt if he still felt the same way about organized labor, relief expenditures and the wage-hour bill, and Roosevelt said he did.

Some here regard this as a demand for a price. At any rate, Garner won no compromise but only a complete removal of all portions of the bill affecting the supreme court. Later the "recommittee" went to Garner and announced its position. Some of these senators reported later that he seemed well satisfied and wanted only to keep the party intact.

Garner Gives In

Then all of a sudden you heard that Garner had told Senator Wheeler and the opposition to draft their own bill. Senator Barkley, the new party leader, went before the hostile judiciary committee with Garner, and got much less than he expected.

Garner had command of the show and it was obvious to everyone that he was working for something which

Altogether Fiermonte discovered that riches are not everything in America.

As most foreigners believe.

Jack Dempsey's devotion to his baby daughters, Joan and Judy, is an interesting phase of the ex-mauler's many-sided character. All the spare time he has from business is spent in the nursery patty-caking and hissing baby talk. When out of town he phones every two hours and insists that the youngsters gurgle over the phone. His idea of a big day is to take them to Central Park and be allowed full custodianship of the babies.

Some day there should be a feature story about New York's late and long breakfasters who usually eat between 11 and 12 in the dining rooms of hotels or clubs. They appear fresh, freshly bathed, shaved and massaged, wearing a boutonniere and order their breakfast as carefully as the practiced gourmet does his dinner. They eat slowly and rarely remove their eyes from some sedate morning paper. Afterwards they linger over an expensive cigar, and just before the luncheon dishes arrive, off—nobody seems to know where.

It may be the new order is best. That I do not profess to know. But I do know there are more men seeking employment today than at any time in my life and there is more antagonism between employer and employee than I have ever known.

As a nose-to-the-grindstone worker I have somehow always found time for all the relaxation I needed. More than a two weeks vacation bored me and in late years I have not even thought of vacations although I am privileged to take a month or six weeks a year at any time I choose.

I believe that every man should retire, but the age at which he should retire is one for argument. Some of the shrewdest executives I ever encountered are in their 70's. And many of them would not quit under any circumstance.

In rounding up a group of stock salesmen who sold a half million dollars worth of spurious stuff around New York in a few weeks, the leaders confessed that all of their customers were among servant girls and men of small salaries. The rascals' promises of quick and huge profits were too much.

The judge who awarded the small town doctor $12,000 damages for comparatively brief services to W. C. Fields, it seems to me, laid himself wide open to argument. He contended that a small town doctor was entitled to charge the same fees as a big city doctor. Doctors in cities have more than quadruple the expense of a village doctor and consequently must make higher charges. And $12,000, even for a city doctor, without surgical work, is a pretty stiff price for services during an ordinary illness.

Many theatrical-wise believe the coming season is to be the legitimate theater's testing year. The inroads of Hollywood and the radio have been terrific and there were only about a half dozen shows that made any profit last season. This cannot go on. There are some ambitious plans on the fire but if they fizzle the legitimate theater will be well nigh prostrate.

Most reporters and all news photographers got a cheerful wallop when a judge jailed Enzo Fiermonte for five days on an old auto violation charge. Fiermonte was once a seeker of publicity when, as a third rate prize fighter, he was trying for bouts. Then he married the rich ex-Mrs. John Jacob Astor and went all of a sudden Piping Rock. He insisted that he be addressed as "Mister Fiermonte" instead of "Enzo" as all the boys knew him in other days. The judge, too,

HULL WOULD ASSIST AMERICAN NATIONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Secretary Hull asked congress today to bolster the national defense of other American republics by leasing them ships the navy no longer uses.

He said he was acting at President Roosevelt's request.

Invoking the administration's "good neighbor" policy, Hull recommended specific cooperation with Brazil, which he said was concerned with "certain tendencies of the world political situation" and "forceful action" taken by some nations to obtain "access to raw materials."

Because of its concern over world affairs, Hull said, the Brazilian government had thought "it the part of prudence to improve its relatively modest national defense."

But he added that "circumstances seem gradually to be pointing toward a grave crisis."

In Nanking a foreign office spokesman said: "If Kawagoe desires to open negotiations there will be negotiations; they can be entered into at any time as long as diplomatic relations exist." He added, however:

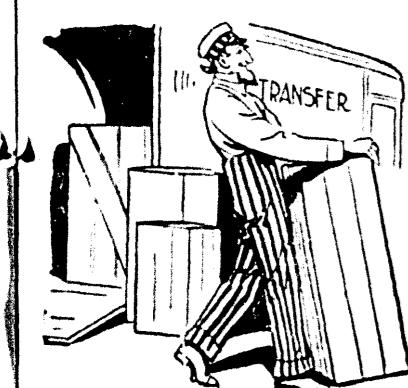

"Relations of China and Japan have reached such a critical stage that the issue of war or peace must be determined quickly, but it still is not too late to avert an armed conflict if Japan will make a great effort to that end. Failing such an effort, it will be difficult to discover further hope for peace."

Authorities said the evacuation of Nanking was ordered as the only possible step in face of mounting dangers from Chinese troop concentrations in that region and the impossibility of defending the concession, already ringed by Chinese barricades on three sides, against any considerable force.

As the undeclared war in northeastern Hopeh province came to the end of its first month tonight, Chinese military authorities at Nanking expressed belief that new and more extensive Japanese operations were imminent.

The chief theater of Japanese offensive action, they said, would be the Peiping-Suiyuan railway running northwest from the ancient capital into Chahar and Mongolia. The purpose would be to drive all Chinese troops from Chahar—the northern section of which already is under domination of Japan's Manchukuo allies—as the Japanese profess to consider Chinese forces in the Kalgan area a menace to their rear.

WANTLY, as Britain did in similar case in 1927. The evacuation, according to authoritative sources, was made following long Chinese-Japanese negotiations seeking to prevent the month-old conflict in the north from spreading to central China. Shigeru Kawage, Japan's ambassador to China, returning to Shanghai after a month as an inactive onlooker in north China, declared: "I intend to exhaust all diplomatic possibilities in seeking a solution."

But he added that "circumstances seem gradually to be pointing toward a grave crisis."

Nanking a foreign office spokesman said: "If Kawage desires to open negotiations, there will be negotiations; they can be entered into at any time as long as diplomatic relations exist." He added, however:

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 7.—(AP)—Farm men and women from every parish in the state—approximately 1,500 of them—will gather here Monday for the 26th annual short course at Louisiana State University.

J. W. Bateman, director of the agricultural extension division of the university, who will be in charge of the course, has planned a full program of activities for the four-day school.

For the men, there will be discussions of various problems and practices of agronomy, beef cattle, dairy, farm organization, forestry, horticulture, livestock and poultry. The women will study child care, foods, gardening, health and home improvement.

Recreation is as important a purpose of the course as instruction and the farm folk will reach their peak of fun-making at the close of the course Thursday, when all of them will picnic on the lawn of the governor's mansion as guests of Governor and Mrs. Richard Leche.

cumbers past 70 years of age did not.

Speaker Bankhead immediately predicted the house would pass the measure with dispatch.

He said the bill probably would be sent to a Senate-House conference Monday merely as a matter of form but expressed belief there would be little disposition on the part of house members to disagree over its provisions.

The substitute bill, drafted by the Senate judiciary committee, did not even mention changes in the supreme bench, but provided for four procedural reforms in lower courts.

The new measure was explained on the floor by Senator McCarran, Democrat, Nevada, as implausible of the administration's original proposal.

He was assisted by Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont, also an enemy of the abandoned bill, who asserted that the substitute had been drawn up "with entire impartiality" and "without a trace of partisan bias."

Only once was there any expression of opposition.

Senator Lewis, Democrat, Illinois, criticized the measure as "a direct violation of the constitution," because it would remove the power of single federal judges to hold acts of Congress invalid. The bill would require a three-judge court to pass on questions involving the constitutionality of federal laws.

Such a provision, Lewis argued, would wipe out the protection which a single federal judge can now afford by enjoining the enforcement of statutes he believes to be invalid.

McCarran introduced a minor clause authorizing the attorney general to intervene in cases affecting the United States. It no sooner reached the desk than Garner declared the amendment adopted by unanimous consent.

He swung his gavel once more and ruled that the bill itself has passed "without objection."

Instantly the Senate broke into an uproar, as Senator Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, and Lewis protested votes against the measure. After a brief argument, however, they agreed to the vice-president's ruling.

He will be pleased to furnish details. All replies held in strict confidence.

WATERSPOUT BREAKS ON PONTCHARTRAIN

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Witnesses reported watching the phenomenon of a gigantic waterspout form and break without damage on Lake Pontchartrain about 6 p.m. yesterday while a heavy thundercloud was passing over the lake off of West End.

J. Adolph Meise and Harry Batt of Pontchartrain Beach, who were driving along the lake seawall, said the spout extended from the water about a mile high in the sky and that its thickness was comparable to three city blocks at the base.

They said the spout, of a grayish-blue color, swerved to the northwest and broke at the top. A heavy rain followed at the spot as the water dropped back.

A few hours previously there was a drop of 22.5 degrees in the temperature here and then the temperature gradually climbed back to 80 degrees by 4 p.m.

Prior to that period of American history known as the "gilded age" of the early nineties, much of the aristocracy of the land had commissioned cabinet makers to create for them furniture true to the fashion of the time. This trend of design bore marks of the affluence of that period later to be known as the Early Victorian.

Only the better examples created during this era have remained as the heirlooms of today. Each piece of this grouping has been copied from those models now in the bedroom of lovely Katherine Franklin, a direct descendant of President Andrew Jackson. The rosebud hand carvings and attractive head mouldings add to each piece an ornamentation of interest and refinement.

No finer cabinet woods could be used than the genuine solid wild cherry. The full beauty of this wood is enhanced by the soft and mellow hand antiqued patina.

THE NEW RATINGS
High school football fans will find a strange classification of teams this fall. The state athletic committee has decided to change the order of things again, and their latest brainchild is the creation of the class AA rating.

When the next campaign rolls around, high school grid fans will find the teams classified as class AA, A and B. Monroe will have schools of two classifications—AA and A. Ouachita, with an enrollment of over 500 boys, automatically enters class AA. Neville remains in class A. Ouachita and Byrd high of Shreveport are the only class AA teams in north Louisiana at present.

As we understand the new order, a class A school may enter class AA by application. It is said that Haynesville is toying with the thought of stepping up, and if the Tornado decides to enter class AA, it will increase the number of AA schools in north Louisiana to three. Neville, it is said, is content to remain in the A division.

Perhaps this is a step to attempt to popularize high school football again. Last year the crowds at high school football games here weren't anything to brag about. We know of several instances where the gate receipts didn't even pay the guarantees—and some of the guarantees were ridiculous low. The good brand of football being played by Northeast Center and Louisiana Tech, for instance, naturally tends to lure the fans away from high school football in this section.

We don't believe that a re-classification of teams is going to solve the problem. The schedule is the thing. As long as high school teams schedule other elevens that are obviously beaten before they take the field, the fans aren't going to turn out. Last year the customers were present in large numbers when they thought two evenly matched teams would meet. The games which presented Monroe teams against inferior elevens were the ones that lost money.

A REAL BATTLE
Speaking of football—which seems silly with the thermometer hovering around the hundred mark—reminds us that there's a game to be played this fall that we'd give a pretty to see. It's scheduled for South Bend, Ind., on Nov. 6, and the teams which will attempt to beat each other's ears down are Notre Dame and Pitt.

As every football fan knows, Notre Dame and Pitt have severed athletic relations. The 1938 schedule of the two teams did not include the other. This game has been one of the nation's outstanding football attractions for several years, but after 1937 it may be many years before they meet again.

The 1937 contest, of course, was scheduled before the rift occurred.

Last spring it was announced that Notre Dame and Pitt would not meet in 1938 because of conflicting dates. But that wasn't the real reason. The reason that Notre Dame won't play Pitt is that Elmer Layden is plenty sore at Joe Sutherland.

It all goes back to a dinner given prior to last year's meeting between the two teams, when Pitt ran roughshod over Layden's Irish. Elmer claims that Jock smacked him. The story goes that Sutherland, before the entire assemblage, turned his head when Layden approached him. Jock's friends say it isn't so—that Layden merely imagined he was slighted.

Anyway, Elmer went back to South Bend in a huff and it develops that he still was miffed when the time came to make out the 1938 schedule for the Irish. And Pitt was left off.

Now on Nov. 6 these two powerhouses meet in what may be their last engagement for some time. Every Pittsburgh fan who can rouse up train or bus fare, plus the price of a ticket to the game, will be on hand to cheer—and fight for the Panthers. And the Irish won't be lacking for supporters, either.

Down on the field, two teams which have been "inspired" by dressing room talks of their two head coaches will be fighting it out. You can imagine those talks—"your coach has been insulted, now get out there on that field and avenge that insult, etc., etc." And don't think it won't be a battle.

Year in, you're anywhere near South Bend on Nov. 6, beg, borrow or steal a ticket to the Notre Dame-Pitt game. A ringside seat in the Spanish war zone wouldn't enable you to see half as much action.

CHICAGO, AUG. 7.—(P)—The Boston Bees, after Bill Davis was forced from the Chicago mound with a side injury in the sixth inning, fell on three relief hurlers for all their runs in that frame today to defeat the league-leading Cubs 8 to 6 before 9,465 spectators. The defeat reduced the Bruins' margin over the idle, second-place New York Giants to five games.

Augie Galan's 16th homer and another circuit smash by Bill Herman with two mates on base had given Lee, the Cubs' leading pitcher in the victory column, a 4 to 0 start toward his 15th triumph. The hulky southpaw, who granted only three hits during the first five innings, pulled muscles in his side while walking Hal Wartler at the start of the sixth. After starting the game to Vince DiMaggio, was forced to leave the hill.

The veteran Charley Root, the Cubs' renowned game-saver, was rushed into the game with scarcely any warm-up.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankee sophomore star, added two points and his .370 average was good for third place, while Charley Gehring, Detroit's ace second-sacker, added nine points during the week for a season's mark of .339.

DiMaggio joined Bill in the total hit race, each having had 131 safeties; DiMaggio was out in front with total runs scored—100—and bagged four homers during the week for a season's leading total of 32. Greenberg continued to lead in runs driven in, with 111 to his credit, while Bill added five doubles and paced the two-base hit department with a total of 37.

Little Mike Kirevich of Chicago was the triples leader, with an even dozen base knocks, while the stolen base honors again were in the possession of fleet Bill Chapman of Boston, who had pilfered 27 sacks, two during the past week. New York's team batting mark of .292 showed a gain of two points and was tops for the circuit, while Detroit again paced the team fielding department, with a mark of .976.

Chicago made 19 double plays during the week and led all clubs with a season total of 112. John Murphy of the Yankees showed the week's biggest gain among the hurlers, winning three and losing none for a season's mark of 11 wins and only 3 defeats. His teammate, Red Ruffing, won one game and his mark of 14 victories and three losses was the best in the circuit for total game appearances. He had been in only 17 contests. Monty Stratton of Chicago won once and his record was 14 wins and four losses, while Roxy Lawson of Detroit, with one loss in the seven day period, had a mark of 12 wins and four setbacks.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez still led in strikeouts, fanning three batsmen during the week for a season's total of 128.

RIGGS WINS ANOTHER CROWN BY DEFAULT

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 7.—(P)—For the second time in as many tournaments, Bobby Riggs, clever young player from Los Angeles, won a tennis title by default today. Jiro Yamagishi, Japanese Davis Cup star, was forced to withdraw from the Meadow club invitation tourney final after Riggs won the first two sets, 6-4, 6-3.

Yamagishi revealed that he had pulled a muscle in his right shoulder during a doubles match yesterday. Rather than disappoint the large gallery, he attempted to play but the pain became so intense he was forced to abandon the effort after two sets.

Riggs also won last week's Seabright, N. J., tournament by default when an injury forced Wilmer Allis out of the final and he received a default from Sidney Wood in the quarter finals here. Wood collapsed before a long match, played in steaming hot weather, could be finished.

Riggs earned one title, however, when he paired with another Los Angeles youngster, Bernard Jarvin of Tenny, N. J., and Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., 1-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1, in the doubles final.

The mixed doubles event went to Mrs. John Gensler of Southampton and Frank Buxby of Miami who whipped Allison of Philadelphia and Dwight F. Davis, Jr., of Southampton, 6-4, 6-2.

SOFTBALL SERIES IN TWO LEAGUES OPEN THIS WEEK

City Loop Play-Offs Begin
Monday And Twilight
Starts Play Tuesday

The City softball league's champion ship series gets underway here tomorrow with Saul Adler's Garagemen, defending champions, meeting Tidwell and Sons at Y's park, and Monroe Hardware and Cooperative-Bireley tangling on the Plum street diamond. Games will start at 5:30 p. m.

As we understand the new order, a class A school may enter class AA by application. It is said that Haynesville is toying with the thought of stepping up, and if the Tornado decides to enter class AA, it will increase the number of AA schools in north Louisiana to three. Neville, it is said, is content to remain in the A division.

Perhaps this is a step to attempt to popularize high school football again.

Last year the crowds at high school football games here weren't anything to brag about. We know of several instances where the gate receipts didn't even pay the guarantees—and some of the guarantees were ridiculously low. The good brand of football being played by Northeast Center and Louisiana Tech, for instance, naturally tends to lure the fans away from high school football in this section.

We don't believe that a re-classification of teams is going to solve the problem. The schedule is the thing.

As long as high school teams schedule other elevens that are obviously beaten before they take the field, the fans aren't going to turn out. Last year the customers were present in large numbers when they thought two evenly matched teams would meet.

The games which presented Monroe teams against inferior elevens were the ones that lost money.

A REAL BATTLE

Speaking of football—which seems silly with the thermometer hovering around the hundred mark—reminds us that there's a game to be played this fall that we'd give a pretty to see. It's scheduled for South Bend, Ind., on Nov. 6 and the teams which will attempt to beat each other's ears down are Notre Dame and Pitt.

As every football fan knows, Notre Dame and Pitt have severed athletic relations. The 1938 schedule of the two teams did not include the other. This game has been one of the nation's outstanding football attractions for several years, but after 1937 it may be many years before they meet again. The 1937 contest, of course, was scheduled before the rift occurred.

Last spring it was announced that Notre Dame and Pitt would not meet in 1938 because of conflicting dates. But that wasn't the real reason. The reason that Notre Dame won't play Pitt is that Elmer Layden is plenty sick at Jock Sutherland.

It all goes back to a dinner given prior to last year's meeting between the two teams, when Pitt ran roughshod over Layden's Irish. Elmer claims that Jock snubbed him. The story goes that Sutherland, before the entire assemblage, turned his head when Layden approached him. Jock's friends say it isn't so—that Layden merely imagines he was slighted.

Anyway, Elmer went back to South Bend in a huff and it develops that he still was miffed when the time came to make out the 1938 schedule for the Irish. And Pitt was left off.

Now on Nov. 6 these two powerhouses meet in what may be their last engagement for some time. Every Pittsburgh fan who can rouse up train or bus fare, plus the price of a ticket to the game, will be on hand to cheer and fight for the Panthers. And the Irish won't be lacking for supporters, either.

Down on the field, two teams which have been "inspired" by dressing room talks of their two head coaches will be fighting it out. You can imagine those talks—"your coach has been insulted, now get out there on that field and avenge that insult, etc., etc." And don't think it won't be a battle.

Yessir, if you're anywhere near South Bend on Nov. 6, beg, borrow or steal a ticket to the Notre Dame-Pitt game. A ringside seat in the Spanish war zone wouldn't enable you to see half as much action.

COTTON MENACED BY CATERPILLAR

Pest Commonly Found On Corn And Tomatoes Attacking Squares, Bolls

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 7.—(AP)—An apparently unclassified weevil and a common garden caterpillar were believed Saturday to be possible threats to what north Louisiana farmers hope will be a bumper cotton crop.

The weevil may be entirely harmless and the caterpillar may be found in only a few cotton fields in the state, but the danger of a new type of insect invasion is certainly present, said experts who inspected Bossier parish fields Saturday morning.

Dr. H. L. Dozier, working under W. A. Anderson, state entomologist for the Louisiana department of agriculture, confessed that he was temporarily baffled by the weevil, but immediately classified the caterpillar which has almost wrecked some crops in Bossier parish.

The caterpillar, Doctor Dozier said, is the ordinary corn ear worm, which is commonly found on corn and tomatoes. Sometimes, the entomologist said, the worm spreads to cotton, but almost never to the extent revealed in Saturday's inspection.

Doctor Dozier, Caddo Parish Agent C. C. McCrary and L. H. DeMoss, assistant to C. Smith, Bossier parish agent, made a thorough check through the fields of C. M. Hutchins, owner of Curtis plantation, about five miles below Barkdale field, on highway 71.

Infestation of the worms was uniformly high all over the 1,600 acres of the plantation, Doctor Dozier estimating that 40 per cent of what appeared to be an excellent crop is already a total loss. Unless the onslaught of the worms is checked, Dr. Dozier said, 75 per cent of the crop may be lost.

The worms attack even the largest bolls, and in many cases where the boll appeared to be uninjured, close inspection revealed that the entire stem had been eaten away, and the inside of the hull was completely gone.

It is believed that the original infestation came from corn fields which bordered the cotton. Even distant fields are not safe, however, as the caterpillars become moths very rapidly, and may fly as far as half a mile, or more, to be carried farther by the wind.

Dr. Dozier said: "On some stalks in the Hutchins fields, nine bolls in 10 had been ruined by the worm. Very slight infestation of this type is not uncommon. Dr. Dozier stated, but attacks this heavy are very rare."

Farmers in Caddo, Bossier and surrounding parishes were urged by Dr. Dozier and the parish agents to inspect their crops carefully, and as soon as possible.

The Hutchins field may be the only one in this section affected by the caterpillar," Dr. Dozier said, "but there are other plantations having infestation just as heavy. If the worms are there, close examination will reveal their presence immediately, but causal inspections may miss them entirely."

Dr. Dozier explained that the caterpillars do not damage the appearance of the field, and that even the most promising looking cotton may be heavily infested.

"Squares, too, may be attacked," the entomologist added, "though most of the damage in Mr. Hutchins' fields seems to have been done to the bolls. Squares have been attacked there, but the invasion of the caterpillars has reached a late state now, and they are working heavily on the large bolls."

The caterpillars may range in size from less than half an inch to two inches in length. Their color may vary from pale green to a dark, purple-brown shade, with several intermediate shades.

"Just because a farmer finds worms of two entirely different colors," Dr. Dozier said, "he need not think it has two types of caterpillar. Chances are both are the same thing."

Dr. Dozier and the farm agents recommended immediate dusting if the infestation is found to be heavy or threatening. A mixture of one part of paraffin to 10 parts of calcium arsenite will be effective, they believe. If applied at a concentration of five pounds to the acre, it will do the job.

As for the weevil, nothing definite was said. Dr. Dozier frankly admitted that he had seen nothing like it, but would not commit himself further.

"It may," he said, "be a very common wood insect which has strayed into cotton—and on the other hand, it may be something entirely new to this section and the south."

The weevils were found on the plantation of H. L. Skinnell at Sibley, La. J. W. Worley, overseer on the plantation, reported seeing the insect several days ago, but said Saturday that he had never until this year seen anything like it.

"I have seen weevils which closely resemble this type in the West Indies," Dr. Dozier said. "There is a slight difference in the markings, but they appear at first glance to belong to the same family."

The entomologist said that there is no cause for immediate alarm, however, as the weevil has been reported only on the Skinnell plantation, and as it may be harmless. He collected several, stating they would be sent to Washington, D. C., for immediate classification.

The weevil is a pale, metallic green, and varies in size from about three-eighths to half an inch. It is found on the under side of the leaf, and apparently feeds only on the foliage of the cotton.

The similar type found in the West Indies, Dr. Dozier said, feeds on the leaves and lays eggs in the foliage.

"The grub drops to the ground almost immediately after they are hatched, bore into the ground and feed on the roots of the plant."

Dr. Dozier explained, however, that the West Indian weevil does not have the copper-colored head found on the specimens in the Skinnell field. This and other slight differences, he said, made it impossible to state just what type of insect had been found.

The entomologist spent all Saturday morning in Bossier parish fields, and left for Opelousas almost immediately after he finished his inspections. He made the trip at the request of A. C. Smith, Bossier parish agent.

RED CROSS MEET TO BE CONDUCTED

Richland Chapter To Discuss Roll Call And Elect Chairman

RAYVILLE, La., Aug. 7.—(Special)—The officers and directors of the Richland parish chapter of the American Red Cross will meet next Friday at the Masonic building, for the regular annual meeting, according to announcement by W. D. Cotton, newly elected chairman of the parish organization.

Dr. Dozier, Caddo Parish Agent C. C. McCrary and L. H. DeMoss, assistant to C. Smith, Bossier parish agent, made a thorough check through the fields of C. M. Hutchins, owner of Curtis plantation, about five miles below Barkdale field, on highway 71.

BRIDGE WORK STARTS

TALLULAH, La., Aug. 7.—(Special)—Work has begun on the bridge across Brushy bayou in Tallulah, Robinson & Young, of Baton Rouge, are the contractors and W. L. Noel and S. E. Huie, of Monroe, are the consulting engineers. The structure will cost over $16,000. A temporary bridge has been built near the site.

The caterpillars may range in size from less than half an inch to two inches in length. Their color may vary from pale green to a dark, purple-brown shade, with several intermediate shades.

"Just because a farmer finds worms of two entirely different colors," Dr. Dozier said, "he need not think it has two types of caterpillar. Chances are both are the same thing."

COTTON MENACED BY CATERPILLAR

Pest Commonly Found On Corn And Tomatoes Attacking Squares, Bolls

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 7.—(P)—An apparently unclassified weevil and a common garden caterpillar were believed Saturday to be possible threats to what north Louisiana farmers hope will be a bumper cotton crop.

The weevil may be entirely harmless and the caterpillar may be found in only a few cotton fields in the state, but the danger of a new type of insect invasion is certainly present, said experts who inspected Bossier parish fields Saturday morning.

Dr. H. L. Dozier, working under W. A. Anderson, state entomologist for the Louisiana department of agriculture, confessed that he was temporarily baffled by the weevil, but immediately classified the caterpillar which has almost wrecked some crops in Bossier parish.

The caterpillar, Doctor Dozier said, is the ordinary corn ear worm, which is commonly found on corn and tomatoes. Sometimes, the entomologist said, the worm spreads to cotton, but almost never to the extent revealed in Saturday's inspection.

Doctor Dozier, Caddo Parish Agent C. C. McCrary and L. H. DeMoss, assistant to C. Smith, Bossier parish agent, made a thorough check through the fields of C. M. Hutchins, owner of Curtis plantation, about five miles below Barkdale Field on highway 11.

Infestation of the worm was uniformly high all over the 1,600 acres of the plantation, Doctor Dozier estimating that 40 per cent of what appeared to be an excellent crop is already a total loss. Unless the onslaught of the worms is checked, Dr. Dozier said, 75 per cent of the crop may be lost.

The worms attack even the largest bolls, and in many cases where the boll appeared to be uninjured, close inspection revealed that the entire stem had been eaten away, and the inside of the hull was completely gone.

It is believed that the original infestation came from corn fields which bordered the cotton. Even distant fields are not safe, however, as the caterpillars become moths very rapidly, and may fly as far as half a mile or may be carried farther by the wind, Dr. Dozier said.

On some stalks in the Hutchins fields, nine bolls in 10 had been ruined by the worm. Very slight infestation of this type is not uncommon, Dr. Dozier stated, but attacks this heavy are very rare.

Farmers in Caddo, Bossier and surrounding parishes were urged by Dr. Dozier and the parish agents to inspect their crops carefully, and as soon as possible.

The Hutchins field may be the only one in this section affected by the caterpillar," Dr. Dozier said, "but there is danger that other plantations have infestation just as heavy. If the worms are there, close examination will reveal their presence immediately, but casual inspections may miss them entirely."

Dr. Dozier explained that the caterpillars do not damage the appearance of the field, and that even the most promising looking cotton may be heavily infested.

"Squares, too, may be attacked," the entomologist added, "though most of the damage in Mr. Hutchins' fields seems to have been done to the bolls. Squares have been attacked there, but the invasion of the caterpillars has reached a late state now, and they are working heavily on the large bolls."

The caterpillars may range in size from less than half an inch to almost two inches in length. Their color may vary from pale green to a dark, purple-brown shade, with several intermediate shades.

"Just because a farmer finds worms of two entirely different colors," Dr. Dozier said, "he need not think he has two types of caterpillar. Chances are both are the same thing."

Dr. Dozier and the farm agents recommended immediate dusting if the infestation is found to be heavy or threatening. A mixture of one part of paraffin to 10 parts of calcium arsenite will be effective, they believe, if applied at a concentration of five pounds to the acre.

As for the weevil, nothing definite was said. Dr. Dozier frankly admitted that he had seen nothing like it, but would not commit himself further.

"It may," he said, "be a very common weed insect which has strayed into cotton—and on the other hand, it may be something entirely new to this section and the south."

The weevils were found on the plantation of H. L. Skinnall at Sligo, La. J. W. Worley, overseer on the plantation, reported seeing the insect several days ago, but said Saturday that he had never until this year seen anything like it.

"I have seen weevils which closely resemble this type in the West Indies," Dr. Dozier said. "There is a slight difference in the markings, but they appear at first glance to belong to the same family."

The entomologist said that there is no cause for immediate alarm, however, as the weevil has been reported only on the Skinnall plantation, and as it may be harmless. He collected several, stating they would be sent to Washington, D. C., for immediate classification.

The weevil is a pale, metallic green, and varies in size from about three-eighths to half an inch. It is found on the under side of the leaf, and apparently feeds only on the foliage of the cotton.

The similar type found in the West Indies, Dr. Dozier said, feeds on the leaves and lays eggs in the foliage.

"The grubs drop to the ground almost immediately after they are hatched, bore into the ground and feed on the roots of the plant."

Dr. Dozier explained, however, that the West Indian weevil does not have the copper-colored head found on the specimens in the Skinnall field. This and other slight differences, he said, made it impossible to state just what type of insect had been found.

The entomologist spent all Saturday morning in Bossier parish fields, and left for Opelousas almost immediately after he finished his inspections. He made the trip at the request of A. C. Smith, Bossier parish agent.

LEGION PLANNING 4,000-MILE TRIP

Mississippi Group Will Spend
More Than Two Weeks
On 'Parade'

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 7.—(AP)—A 4,000-mile parade through 18 states was announced today by the Mississippi department of the American Legion as part of its plans for participation in the legion's national convention at New York City in September.

The Mississippi department will lead the legion parade as a result of its championship membership drive.

"We're simply going to send the world's longest parade to the world's largest parade," said State Commander Adrian Boyd of Clarksville in making the announcement today.

The Mississippi parade section, consisting of seven units depicting the "Story and Progress of the State," will set out from Jackson early in September in time to make brief stops at major cities en route and to reach New York by September 19.

Governor Hugh White, who is in charge of raising funds for the parade, announced that he would send a personal representative with the motorized parade caravan to carry greetings and tokens of esteem to all governors of states through which the Mississippi units will pass.

Tentative plans are for the parade to head east toward the Atlantic seaboard, turning north in Georgia and proceeding through state capitals to New York City. The return trip will be made westward to Chicago, then south to Jackson, where the floats are expected to arrive in time to make their final appearance at the Mississippi state fair.

In Dearborn, Mich., on the return trip, the contingent will be guests of Henry Ford, who has contributed the trucks on which the floats will be built.

Final float designs will be delivered to department headquarters tomorrow morning by Preston Waldrop, Jackson architect. The designs are all taken from sketches submitted in a statewide contest in which Mississippians were offered $600 in prizes for the best suggestion. Subjects included are industry, agriculture, dairying, recreation and history, with a sixth float representing Mississippi's program to balance agriculture with industry.

Suggested by Mississippians and built by Mississippians out of Mississippi materials, the floats are to be of semi-permanent construction, sturdy enough to withstand the 4,000-mile tour. Construction board from the state's masonite plant at Laurel will form the major part of the material. Designs carry out a modernistic effect.

HUMBLE GIVEN 5 DRILLING PERMITS

More Than Thirty Wildcat Wells Now Going Down In South Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—(AP)—With the company already operating two drilling rigs on the potash prospect at Lake Washington in Plaquemine parish about 35 miles below New Orleans, the Humble Oil and Refining company Saturday obtained five additional permits for drilling in the section, the Louisiana state conservation department announced.

Operations of the Humble have resulted in the discovery of a shallow salt dome, according to information received by the conservation department. Although this prospect has been known for several years, this is the first activity that has been started in that section.

Departmental records showed that there were more than 30 wildcat wells being drilled in practically every section of south Louisiana.

One of the outstanding developments in the south Louisiana oil industry during the past week was the completion of the new discovery well in St. Charles parish near Des Allemands in St. Charles parish.

The well was brought in more than two weeks ago by the Amerada Petroleum corporation and Louisiana Land and Exploration company.

On the first 24-hour gauge earlier in the week, the well, No. 1 State on Black Prince Island prospect, flowed 570 barrels through various size chokes with tubing pressure of 400 pounds and a casing pressure of 950 pounds. The crude tested 36.1 gravity.

The joint operators have approximately 7,500 acres in the district under lease and the Belmont Oil corporation has approximately 1,500 acres.

A total of 18 new well completions were reported to the conservation department during the week ending Friday and 35 new permits were issued.

The name of the field, name of producer, name of well, and the initial daily production of each well follows in order:

THREE 'STAGE STRUCK' GIRLS WILL GO HOME

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 7.—(AP)—Three "stage struck" Dallas, Tex., high school girls who were detained by police here today as "runaways" were to leave Jackson tonight for their homes.

The girls were listed as Mary Louise Martin, 17; Gloria Martin, 16, and Sammy Love Eaton, 17.

Shortly after reaching Jackson today after a hitch-hiking journey from New Orleans, the girls were taken in custody by Jackson officers. Communicating with Dallas officers, Police Sergeant Bill Phillips was instructed to send the girls home by bus tonight on money wired here by their parents.

The girls said they ran away from home because their parents objected to their ambitious plans to "go on the stage as dancers." The girls said they had $1 when they arrived here. They were en route to Birmingham, they said, and expected to go to Florida eventually.

The Story Awarded Place As One Of 'Best 100 In 1935-36'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This story, first published in the sequentennial edition of the world's best newspaper, Newsweek, in 1936, was chosen by the compilers of "Hometown America," just published by Houghton-Mifflin company, Boston, as one of the "100 Best Stories" of the year. The following is reprinted herewith in response to numerous requests for its republication.

By Fred Williamson

They told us we were to see a "nigger baptizin'." Crude, crass, inept term. What we did see was weird, fantastic manifestation of barbaric religion—like nothing else in the whole gamut of religious expression.

It was like a scene lifted out of an aboriginal jungle, its wild garish color tempered with a feeling that indubitably was an untrutched reflection of contact with the religious impulse of a civilized world.

Overhead the sun mounts higher and its rays beat like a furnace in the burnished face of the water. Across the bayou tall tops of trees seem to sweep the sky. Wisps of grayish vapor tangle themselves in the upper branches. Perhaps they are the "spirits of just men made perfect," translating with a better understanding than skeptical humans this strange spectacle of an untutored race "seeking after God if haply they might find Him."

The priestly rite goes on. The wailing chant rises again as a "brother" in the prosaic garb of a working man is led to the center of the stream.

The priest changes his formula.

"In de n-a-a-o man ob de u-n-u-vi! Boo-o-oo man ob de u-n-u-vi! I do n-a-a-o man ob de e-S-o-n! B-o-o-o-o man ob de w-o-o-r-l-d!"

The terms cannot be misunderstood. The rough-clad candidate is a son of toil. He knows the meaning of work and the significance of the "boss" in relation to his work. He is pledging himself to the service of the greatest "boss" there is.

As he comes up from the plunge, the muddy waters coursing in repulsive rivulets from his clothes, he joins with the shrieking accompaniment the walls of the chanters on the shore.

It is a signal for the priest to direct his attention again to the garish throng clinging to the bluff.

He thrusts his long arms at the crowd.

"Yuh-all!" he shrieks. "Yuh ain' wukkin' fuuh booh what pays off! What yuh gwine do when pay-day comes? Yuh think yuh gwine be paid for gamblin' an' bootleggin', but yuh gwine to be paid off wit' a lot o' bad luck. Yuh bettah git wukkin' fuuh what'll 'ny off!"

The shaft strikes home. Furtive shifting of eyes and shuffling of bodies show plainly enough that the "sinners" have been hit. The message, however, doesn't sink very deep. They are mule and immutable, even though they continue to gaze with a sort of trance-like fascination as the priestly one lifts up his voice in repeated obtrusions.

There is a diversion for the crowd among the cottonwoods on the lip of the bluff when an ancient "mammy" approaches the scene. She is totally blind and almost bent double with the weight of her years. Her red bandanna adds its own bit of color to the scene. One little group stands apart from the rest. It is clustered together, with feet ankle-deep in the slimy mud of the bayou. These are clothed in white and from this band of zealots the strange chanting sounds reach up to be flung back from the brazen sky.

The chant has a certain cadence that is timed to the actions of a huge black-robed, black-capped negro who stands in the middle of the stream. Like a priest celebrating a ritualistic ceremony he lifts up his black hands and crooning in time with the chant, is led to him between two burly, ill-clad helpers.

The walls of the chanters rise in a crescendo of ecstatic frenzy. The roughest kind of interpretation might be translated thus:

"O-o-o-o! A-h-o-h-o! E-e-e-h!
Yah! Yah! Ya-h-y! A-h!
Y-o-y! Ya-e-e-e-h!
Wah! O-h! W-a-s-a-y!"

Repeated over and over again, while individual of the group utter ejaculatory responses:

LEGION PLANNING 4,000-MILE TRIP

Mississippi Group Will Spend
More Than Two Weeks
On 'Parade'

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 7.—(AP)—A 4,000-mile parade through 16 states was announced today by the Mississippi department of the American Legion as part of its plans for participation in the Legion's national convention at New York City in September.

The Mississippi department will lead the Legion parade as a result of its championship membership drive.

"We're simply going to send the world's longest parade to the world's largest parade," said State Commander Adrian Boyd of Clarksdale in making the announcement today.

The Mississippi parade section, consisting of seven units depicting the "Story and Progress of the State," will set out from Jackson early in September in time to make brief stops at major cities en route and to reach New York by September 19.

Governor Hugh White, who is in charge of raising funds for the parade, announced that he would send a personal representative with the motorized parade caravan to carry greetings and tokens of esteem to all governors of states through which the Mississippi unit will pass.

Tentative plans are for the parade to head east toward the Atlantic seaboard, turning north in Georgia and proceeding through state capitals to New York City. The return trip will be made westward to Chicago, then south to Jackson, where the floats are expected to arrive in time to make their final appearance at the Mississippi state fair.

In Dearborn, Mich., on the return trip, the contingent will be guests of Henry Ford, who has contributed the trucks on which the floats will be built.

Final float designs will be delivered to department headquarters tomorrow morning by Preston Waldrop, Jackson architect. The designs are all taken from sketches submitted in a statewide contest in which Mississippians were offered $600 in prizes for the best suggestion. Subjects included are industry, agriculture, dairy, recreation and history, with a sixth float representing Mississippi's program to balance agriculture with industry.

Suggested by Mississippians and built by Mississippians out of Mississippi materials, the floats are to be of semi-permanent construction, sturdy enough to withstand the 4,000-mile tour. Construction board from the state's masonic plant at Laurel will form the major part of the material. Designs carry out a modernistic effect.

HUMBLE GIVEN 5 DRILLING PERMITS

More Than Thirty Wildcat Wells Now Going Down In South Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—(AP)—With the company already operating two drilling rigs on the potash prospect at Lake Washington in Plaquemines parish about 35 miles below New Orleans, the Humble Oil and Refining company Saturday obtained five additional permits for drilling in the section, the Louisiana state conservation department announced.

Operations of the Humble have resulted in the discovery of a shallow salt dome, according to information received by the conservation department. Although this prospect has been known for several years, this is the first activity that has been started in that section.

Departmental records showed that there were more than 30 wildcat wells being drilled in practically every section of south Louisiana.

One of the outstanding developments in the south Louisiana oil industry during the past week was the completion of the new discovery well in St. Charles parish near Des Allemands in St. Charles parish.

The well was brought in more than two weeks ago by the Amerada Petroleum corporation and Louisiana Land and Exploration company.

On the first 24-hour gauge earlier in the week, the well, No. 1 State on Black Prince Island prospect, flowed 570 barrels through various size chokes with a tubing pressure of 400 pounds and a casing pressure of 950 pounds. The crude tested 36.1 gravity.

The joint operators have approximately 7,500 acres in the district under lease and the Felmont Oil corporation has approximately 1,500 acres.

Carefree Vacation Days Almost Over For Big Majority Of Monroe Citizens

Many Are Sorry They Had Holiday So Soon

Single Woman Has Many Vacation Advantages Over Others; Past Week Very Busy

By Eve Bradford

WHEN the thermometer looks as if it is playing an obligato in a high key with the mercury and you feel like kicking the dog, beating your wife, and criticizing the neighbors, then, obviously, it is time to take a vacation.

Those who started off so serenely at the beginning of summer are wishing now that they had planned a later vacation and those who waited are counting the hours until they can turn their back on the prosaic, everyday existence, and enjoy a few weeks of rest and relaxation.

When it comes to vacations the single woman has a few advantages over her married sister. The latter must consider her husband's business, his sport preference and the children's health, but the single girl is as free as the wind to travel where she pleases by train, bus or plane. She may change her plans as often as she likes, eat when she pleases, and, in short, be her own boss. If she detects the wide, open spaces and feels happy only when wearing high heels and a new hat she never lets an overgrown Girl Scout drag her to a dude ranch or on a camping trip. Our advice to the working girl who decides to stay at home and rest during her vacation is—don't do it. You will be so completely groggy and tired after two weeks of idleness at home, your office will look like paradise when you return to work.

We have pretty well covered the waterfront as to vacationists and have decided that Monroe people are the world's greatest travelers. They will soon come trooping home again and Monroe will once more be its jaunty self.

Last week was full of interesting high spots and gracious interludes of social entertaining. One hates to omit anything of interest so everything has been reviewed from caviar to coffee break. Joy Steele's wedding was, of course, the highest moment of all with her bridesmaids, tall slender vestals in that gorgeous wedgwood shade of blue and wearing wisps of bonnets, preceding her to the altar. Joy was the picture of slim maidenliness in her period Emily gown of white chiffon, the hoop skirt, reminiscent of ante-bellum days in the old south. Joy's gifts to her bridesmaids and matron of honor were gazing crystal lockets. We saw the one Happy LaCoux was wearing and naturally the picture of her handsome husband was straightaway placed inside. By the way, Happy, Bruin along came an unfriendly wasp.

and stung him on the chest. Needless to say the fish and the wasp both got away but the memory of the wasp's sting lingered on and on.

A man-eating shark in the gulf waters at Galveston drove Lena Mae Woods and her children back home before their vacation at the Galvez was finished. Lena Mae is now looking around for a cool climate near at home where sea monsters are not waiting to devour youngsters who like to swim.

East is east and west is west—but the twain meets in Havana this summer where Monroe people are vacationing. Carrie Dee Drew and the Louis Langfords are now in Havana and next week Lallage and Gertrude Feazel will add their names to vacationists Cuba bound.

Badminton is now racing in certain families. When good old Sol tires of his day's work and sinks to rest, Ed Seymour, R. L. Davis, Travis Oliver, Jr., and Amos Smelser move back and forth like shuttles across the strip of lawn where the ball is kept in the air. Such slaves are they to their new craze many a dinner has been ruined while the master of the house plays on until darkness descends. And by the way, it takes plenty of vim, vigor and vitality to keep up with that little elusive ball.

The first week in August finds velvet invading the dress shops in time for all you restless clothes hounds who are satisfied with pastels and prints to begin looking.

A first look takes in the rich mellow colors—berry wine, gypsy blue, zinnia, medieval green, fuchsia. Black velvet reminds you that it is about time to let your suntan fade into a pearly complexion.

A second look, followed immediately by a try-on, shows you what is meant by the "censored look" in fall fashions. The waistline, you discover, is definitely girdled.

You wrap the sash around twice to see how slim you are. The skirt falls into a tall, fluted column, making you appear inches taller. The soft fullness gathered into the sleeves and top of the bodice add to the illusion, if necessary, of a slinky hipline.

What you may not have found out during these first looks is that most of the new velvets are crush-resistant, and a fuller meaning of the term than was implied last season.

The luxury fabric has been uniquely woven or subjected to processes that keep the depth, or pile, erect; or at least allow it to shake out that way after a cocktail spill or a sidown strike. At this point you needn't feel extravagant at all in considering velvet for a dinner gown from which you must expect lots of wear.

It won't be at the cleaners when you want to wear it, it won't tell where you've been in one evening. You can this year choose velvet for a "background dress" to be worn with different sets of accessories to change its appearance.

It is the daytime mode that the real test for crush resistant velvet will be made. When designers use it with a free hand for mother-and-daughter dresses the daughter at least will soon be able to tell whether or not it is as practical as it claims to be.

Velvet is combined with wool for a handsome afternoon suit worn with a velvet blouse. But it also gets a play in college wardrobes where only velvet seems to be used.

It is an economical way to furnish your home with new furniture. Use different colors, make odd pieces and you will be surprised at the beautiful effects obtainable.

Almost All Homes Now Have Gardens

Successful Flower Growers Make Extensive Study Of Plants They Cherish

It is said that people do not live by bread alone, but by the beautiful and interesting things about them.

It is now almost impossible to find a home without its garden, however small and unpretentious. Every home owner is now garden conscious and those who raise flowers successfully have made a study of the flowers they grow.

Many of the legends, myths and fables of olden times that have come down to us from our forefathers pertain to trees and flowers, and tell us something about the mental process of unshodded men.

We sometimes hear that ours is a dull and prosaic language, no poetry in our speech, but we use terms and usages which connect us to the childhood of the race, when imagination ruled. We say "as beautiful as the rose, or like the lily for purity, the oak for strength, and willow for form; we extend the olive branch of peace."

Fine meanings are read into the legends and myths of flowers. And many states and nations have chosen flowers to represent them in sentiment. The rose for England, the lily for France, the thistle for Scotland. Although botany was not taught in Shakespeare's time, he mentions the hundred and fifty trees and flowers. The religions of all peoples draw large upon plant life for their usages and figures, even the Christians in such passages in scriptures as "consider the lilies of the field."

Flowers in olden times intruded themselves into the medical field and curious ideas grew up that if the external appearance of the plant relieved the disease it would cure that disease. The aspen leaves shook, they were good for the palsy, nettle tea was good for nettle rash, and wood sorrel, having a heart-shaped leaf, was a heart cordial; liverwort was for the liver.

People adopted the names of flowers and plants. In old Roman times the Coepones were Mr. and Mrs. Onion. The Pisones were the peas, Cicero was Mr. Chick-pea. To this day we have the rose family and the asters, and the Indian names of wild rose and bear lily.

And so we eat, wear, smoke and drink of the juices of plants, there are dreams in some, medicines in other, and in others, death.

Of the many myths and legends on wild flowers, to us of this region none are more interesting than those told by the Indians who lived about the great lake where the famous Hiawatha looked up into the sky, saw the rainbow and whispered to his nurse, "What is that, Nokomis?" and the old Nokomis answered:

"Tis the heaven of flowers you see there;

"All the wild flowers of the forest,
All the lilies of the prairies,
When on earth they fade and perish,
Blossom in that heaven above us."

Some beautiful legends and myths cluster about the following wild flowers:

Lily: The lily typifies virginity and innocence. It comes to our altars at Easter. As the Lord walked in the garden by moonlight all the flowers bent their head but the lily. "I am so much fairer than my sisters," she said, "that I will stand erect as He goes by." But seeing all others bow, a blush suffused her face and tinged it still. "It was the time when lilies bloom and clouds were highest in the air." The lily was dedicated to Juno, queen of the gods.

Arbutus: Called by the Pilgrims "May Flower." Grows in Minnesota near Duluth, Kettle river and the Valley of St. Croix. Grows only in North America. The Chippewa Indians said, "While the earth is still covered with the death cloth of snow, a beautiful maiden appeared. Her cheeks were red like the wild rose and her eyes glowed like the eyes of the fawn at night and her hair was black as the raven's wing. When she breathed the white covering melted. Then she knelt on the ground and took from her bosom rose white flowers and hid them under the leaves."

Clematis: Called love plant for its clinging habit. Little boys smoke the canes for tobacco, in olden times beggars rubbed a decoction of this plant on cuts to make a superficial score and elicit sympathy.

Pitcher Plant: There is something that shocks us, higher life sacrificed to the lower, the plant eating the animal. Or is it that all living things have life only in different degrees of possession not in kind? Difficult to tell some plants from animals. But, anyhow, the poor insect is lured to the cap by the sweet secretion, he slips down the polished inner surface and is digested in the fluids within.

And so, these gems of the plant world have come down to us from far-off time. They permeate our literature and religion, they thread their way through the pages of history, to us.

Carefree Vacation Days Almost Over For Big Majority Of Monroe Citizens

Many Are Sorry They Had Holiday So Soon

Single Woman Has Many Vacation Advantages Over Others; Past Week Very Busy

By Eve Bradford

WHEN the thermometer looks as if it is playing an obligato in a high key with the mercury and you feel like kicking the dog, beating your wife, and criticizing the neighbors, then, obviously, it is time to take a vacation.

Those who started off so serenely at the beginning of summer are wishing now that they had planned a later vacation and those who waited are counting the hours until they can turn their back on the prosaic, everyday existence, and enjoy a few weeks of rest and relaxation.

When it comes to vacations the single woman has a few advantages over her married sister. The latter must consider her husband's business, his sport preference and the children's health, but the single girl is as free as the wind to travel where she pleases by train, bus or plane. She may change her plans as often as she likes, eat when she pleases and, in short, be her own boss. If she detests the wide, open spaces and feels happy only when wearing high heels and a new hat she never lets an overgrown Girl Scout drag her to a dude ranch or on a camping trip. Our advice to the working girl who decides to stay at home and rest during her vacation is—don't do it. You will be so completely groggy and tired after two weeks of idleness at home, your office will look like paradise when you return to work.

We have pretty well covered the waterfront as to vacationists and have decided that Monroe people are the world's greatest travelers. They will soon come trooping home again and Monroe will once more be its jaunty self.

Last week was full of interesting high spots and gracious interludes of social entertaining. One hates to omit anything of interest so everything has been reviewed from caviar to cake, the highest moment of all with her bridesmaids, tall slender vestals in that gorgeous wedgewood shade of blue and wearing wigs of bonnets, preceding her to the altar. Joy was the picture of slim maidliness in her period Emily gown of white chiffon, the hoop skirt, reminiscent of antebellum days in the old south. Joy's gifts to her bridesmaids and matron of honor were gazing crystal lockets. We saw the one Happy LaCour was wearing and naturally the picture of her handsome husband was straight-way placed inside. By the way, Happy, Bruin along came an unfriendly wasp and stung him on the chest. Needless to say the fish and the wasp both got away but the memory of the wasp's sting lingered on and on.

A man-eating shark in the gulf waters at Galveston drove Lena Mae Woods and her children back home before their vacation at the Lagoon was finished. Lena Mae is now looking around for a cool climate near at home where sea monsters are not waiting to devour youngsters who like to swim.

East is east and west is west—but the twain meets in Havana this summer where Monroe people are vacationing. Carrie Dee Drew and the Louis Langfords are now in Havana and next week Lallie and Gertude Feazel will add their names to vacationists Cuba bound.

Badminton is now raging in certain families. When good old Sol tires of his day's work and sinks to rest, Ed Seymour, R. L. Davis, Travis Oliver, Jr., and Amos Smeiser move back and forth like shuttles across the strip of lawns where the ball is kept in the air. Such slaves are they to their new craze many a dinner has been ruined while the master of the house plays on until darkness descends. And by the way, it takes plenty of vim, vigor and vitality to keep up with that little elusive ball.

The first week in August finds velvet invading the dress shops in time for all you restless clothes hounds who are satisfied with pastels and prints to begin looking.

A first look takes in the rich mellow colors—berry wine, gypsy blue, zinnia, medieval green, fuchsia. Black velvet reminds you that it is about time to let your suntan fade into a pale complexion.

Or the many myths and legends on wild flowers, to us of this region none are more interesting than those told by the Indians who lived about the great lake where the famous Hiawatha looked up into the sky, saw the rainbow and whispered to his nurse, "What is that, Nokomis?" and the old Nokomis answered,

"Tis the heaven of flowers you see there;

"All the wild flowers of the forest, All the lilies of the prairies, When on earth they fade and perish, Blossom in that heaven above us."

Some beautiful legends and myths cluster about the following wild flowers:

Lily: The lily typifies virginity and innocence. It comes to our altars at Easter. As the Lord walked in the garden by moonlight all the flowers bent their head but the lily. "I am so much fairer than my sisters," she said, "that I will stand erect as He goes by." But seeing all others bow, a blush suffused her face and tinged it still. "It was the time when lilies bloom and clouds were highest in the air." The lily was dedicated to Juno, queen of the gods.

Arbutus: Called by the Pilgrims "May Flower." Grows in Minnesota near Duluth, Kettle river and the Valley of St. Croix. Grows only in North America. The Chippewa Indians said, "While the earth is still covered with the death cloth of snow, a beautiful maiden appeared. Her cheeks were red like the wild rose and her eyes glowed like the eyes of the fawn at night and her hair was black as the raven's wing. When she breathed the white covering melted. Then she knelt on the ground and took from her bosom rose white flowers and hid them under the leaves."

Clematis: Climbs love plant for its clinging habits. Little boys smoke the canes for tobacco, in olden times beggars rubbed a decoction of this plant on cuts to make a superficial sore and elicit sympathy.

Pitcher Plant: There is something that shocks us, higher life sacrificed to the lower, the plant eating the animal. Or is it that all living things have life only in different degrees of possession not in kind? Difficult to tell some plants from animals. But, anyhow, the poor insect is lured to the cap by the sweet secretion, he slips down the polished inner surface and is digested in the fluids within.

It is the daytime mode that the real test for crush resistant velvet will be made. When designers use it with a free hand for mother-and-daughter dresses the daughter at least will soon be able to tell whether or not it is as practical as it claims to be.

Velvet is combined with wool for a handsome afternoon suit worn with a velvet blouse. But it also gets a play in college wardrobes where only velvetine used to tread.

Miss Marjorie Oliver, supervisor of Monroe's elementary schools, has returned from Baton Rouge, where she has been studying at the state university toward her master's degree.

Mrs. E. L. McNeill, Miss Mamie McNeill and Mrs. Paul R. Pearce and little daughter will leave Monday morning for New Orleans, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Evans for the next 10 days.

Miss Elizabeth Trull attended the wedding of Miss Dixie Harland at the Highland Park Presbyterian church, Memphis, Tenn., Saturday night. Miss Trull was the soloist on this occasion.

Almost All Homes Now Have Gardens

Successful Flower Growers Make Extensive Study Of Plants They Cherish

It is said that people do not live by bread alone, but by the beautiful and interesting things about them.

It is now almost impossible to find a home without its garden, however small and unpretentious. Every home owner is now garden conscious and those who raise flowers successfully have made a study of the flowers of Persian, Chaldean, the Greek, from the days of the Olympic Gods to the time of the Christians on down to the shelves of the modern drugstore, to the physician's bag and to your garden.

It's getting to be a popular hobby now with nature lovers to have a wild flower garden. These shy and sometimes rare denizens of the woods and fields may, if one is careful to give them the same environment from which they were taken, grow well in cultivated gardens.

Many of the legends, myths and fables of olden times that have come down to us from our forefathers pertain to trees and flowers, and tell us something about the mental process of unschooled men.

We sometimes hear that ours is a dull and prosaic language, no poetry in our speech, but we use terms and usages which connect us to the childhood of the race, when imagination ruled. We say "as beautiful as the rose, or like the lily for purity, the oak for strength, and willow for form, we extend the olive branch of peace."

Fine meanings are read into the legends and myths of flowers. And many states and nations have chosen flowers to represent them in sentiment. The rose for England, the lily for France, the thistle for Scotland. Although botany was not taught in Shakespeare's time, he mentions the hundred and fifty trees and flowers. The religions of all peoples draw large upon plant lore for their usages and figures, even the Christians in such passages in scriptures as "consider the lilies of the field."

Flowers in olden times intruded themselves into the medical field and curious ideas grew up that if the external appearance of the plant resembled the disease it would cure that disease. The aspen leaves shook, they were good for the palsy, nettle root was good for nettle rash, and wood sorrel, having a heart-shaped leaf, was a heart cordial; liverwort was for the liver.

People adopted the names of flowers and plants. In old Roman times the Coepiones were Mr. and Mrs. Onion. The Pisones were the peas, Cicero was Mr. Chick-pea. To this day we have the rose family and the asters, and the Indian names of wild rose and bear lily.

And so we eat, wear, smoke and drink of the juices of plants, there are dreams in some, medicines in other, and in others, death.

Or the many myths and legends on wild flowers, to us of this region none are more interesting than those told by the Indians who lived about the great lake where the famous Hiawatha looked up into the sky, saw the rainbow and whispered to his nurse, "What is that, Nokomis?" and the old Nokomis answered,

Miss Joy Steele Becomes Bride Of Lattimer Lewis At Presbyterian Church

Prominent Families United By Ceremony

Misses Shotwell, Gray, Stubbs And Williams Bridesmaids; Reception Is Held

The first Presbyterian church, cool and shadowy and fragrant with the perfume of myriad Madonna lilies, was the scene of a fashionable wedding Tuesday, August the third, when Miss Joy Steele, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell Steele, and Mr. Lattimer Lafitte Lewis, son of Mrs. Lula Boyce Lewis and the late George Clement Lewis of Tuscaloosa, Ala., repeated their marriage vows before a lily banked altar at nine-thirty o'clock in the morning.

Tall, classic shaped urns of white porcelain, handles tied with wide satin ribbon and placed in prominent position on the white covered dais, overflowed with superb white Madonna lilies and andianum. Southern smilax trailed its length over channel rail and choir loft and formed a solid curtain of lush green in the background. Lilies tied with fluffs of silvery tulle adorned the pews reserved for members of the family and a few intimate friends.

Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church, officiated in the absence of Rev. Ernest Holloway, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The bridegroom's attendants, in white linens, de rigueur of southern summer weddings, were Mr. Herbert Lewis of Tuscaloosa, best man, and Messrs. Owen Merideth, Arthur Tidwell, Jr., James C. Steele, Jr., and John Williams, groomsmen. All wore boutonnieres of white valley lilies.

While the audience was being seated, Miss Nellie Breard sang in splendid voice "Because" and "O Promise Me" accompanied by Mr. Leon Hammond, organist.

The bridesmaids, Misses Pollyanna Shotwell, Louise Gray, Carolyn Stubbs and Elizabeth Williams, wore exquisite period gowns of Wedgwood blue chiffon by Emily. The basques were extremely tight with short puffed sleeves and square neck edged with Alencon. The hoop skirts were long and full and caught up gracefully with a single blue blossom.

Beguiling pique bonnets of blue were worn and the flowers they carried, pink roses, blue forget-me-nots and yellow achilles, hinted of old-fashioned gardens. A fluting of rose point lace encircled each round bouquet.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Vernon LaCour, of Thibadeaux, wore a gown of corset, an exact duplicate of those worn by the bridesmaids.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her fur-lined gown of white chiffon by Emily. The hoop skirt was looped in the most engaging manner with white blossoms. The bodice was tight fitting with square neck and high standing collar of rose point lace. Lace edged the short puffed sleeves and formed the cap from which a white tulie veil fell to the edge of the skirt. Her bouquet was fashioned of white orchids, valley lilies and andianum with lengths of white satin ribbons caught with valley lilies. For something old she wore the handsome heirloom diamond ring given to her by her father.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Steele home with a few intimate friends and members of the family in attendance. Mrs. Steele, the bride's charming mother, standing with the wedding party, wore a white crepe model with buttercup yellow felt hat and corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Lewis, the bridegroom's mother, wore a navy blue ensemble with all accessories blue and a corsage of white gardenias.

The double heart-shaped wedding cake embossed in valley lilies, surrounded with a cupid, was placed on a table in the flower banked dining room and cut by the bride before departure. The coffee table, overlaid with handsome Renaissance lace and adorned with superb white roses, was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Feazel, a guest in lace model and wide brimmed pink felt hat.

Individual wedding cakes, embossed in lilies, were served.

The bride changed her wedding gown for a smart advanced fall tailleur of navy blue, light weight wool, with handsome gray fox collar. A corsage of orchids created a note of distinction.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis will spend their honeymoon on the gulf coast, and later will be at home in Tuscaloosa, where Mr. Lewis is engaged in business.

Mrs. Lewis, an outstanding figure in Monroe's younger social circle, is a graduate of Gulf Park college, Gulfport, Miss., and the University of Alabama. She is a member of Alpha Gamma, national sorority, and Delta social sorority.

Mrs. Lewis is a descendant of two old southern families. Her great-grandparents settled in Ouachita and Union parishes before the war between the states. Her mother, formerly Miss Anna Hill, was born in Union parish and has resided in this vicinity all of her life.

Mrs. Lewis' father is a prominent figure in civic and industrial circles of this city. He is president of the J. C. Steele Lumber company and a director of the People's Building and Loan association.

Mr. Lewis, on his paternal side, is a direct descendant of the Lewis family of Fredericksburg, Va., famed for the Lewis and Clarke expedition. His father was the son of Charles L. Lewis and Marie Lafitte Lewis, who was the daughter of the historical John B. Lafitte of Paris, France. Mr. Lewis' maternal grandfather, J. P. Boyce, of Scotland, who settled in Charleston, S. C., was president of the Kentucky Baptist Theological seminary for many years.

Mr. Lewis attended the University of Alabama and Baylor University in Texas.

Prominent among the handsome gifts of silver, china, mahogany, linens and crystal was the liquor set of blown glass handed down from John B. Lafitte and in possession of the Lewis family for 100 years.

Misses Mary Gretchen and Addie Nell Rainbolt have returned from a visit with their aunt, Mrs. N. Rutherford, of Dallas.

Members of Delta Beta Sigma sorority will meet this afternoon with Miss Virginia Husted.

Miss Collens Gives Plans For Wedding

Nuptials To Be Held At Presbyterian Church; Mrs. Clark To Be Matron Of Honor

... the eighteenth is Marie Collens' wedding day. When she walks down the aisle at the Presbyterian church in traditional satin, lace wedding veil, orange blossoms and "something borrowed and something blue, something old and something new," she will be preceded by her sister, Mrs. Prentice Clark, who will serve as matron of honor, and four bridesmaids, Mrs. Neil Buie, Mrs. Milling Bernstein, Miss Lela Germany and Mrs. Walter Hilborn, of Alexandria, sister of Miss Collens' fiance, Mr. John Blackman.

The flower girls will be Carol Clark, niece of the bride, and Frances Hilborn, niece of the bridegroom, John Wooten, Jr., will serve as ring bearer. Mr. Blackman has selected for his attendants his brother, Mr. Wilbur Blackman of Los Angeles, Calif., who will serve as best man, and Messrs. George Miller, Walter Kellogg, Alston Prophit, Gordon Surguine, John Carroll and Carl Harkenrath, of Alexandria, groomsmen.

Mr. Leon Hammond will be the organist and Mrs. Briscoe Trousdale, Jr., the soloist. Rev. Ernest Holloway, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate. Miss Collens will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. John Whatton Collens.

The pre-nuptial events leading up to the marriage of Miss Collens and Mr. Blackman have been numerous and exceedingly beautiful. Yesterday's compliment was a luncheon for Miss Collens on the Virginia hotel roof with Mrs. John Wooten and Miss Lela Germany as hostesses. Other affairs flooding the hours with pleasure this week will be Mrs. R. W. O'Donnell's luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Allen's buffet supper, Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Jarrell's dinner party at the Lotus club, and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Gill's dinner.

The high social moment of the week will be the dancing party Saturday night at Lakeside Country club with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kellogg, Miss Elizabeth Kennedy and Mr. George Miller, hosts.

Supper under the glittering stars on the wind-swept deck was also a feature of this outing, enjoyed by Mrs. Robert Layton, Mrs. J. Hunter Thatcher, Mrs. C. E. McKenzie, Mrs. Robert Kellogg, Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, Miss Eunice Haynes and the hostess.

Five hundred yards away, down the broad stairways, past the court of fountains, the pavilions of Nazi Germany and Bolshevik Russia face each other in architectural defiance. All Europe has seen this symbolic gesture. The French with their instinct for drama are responsible for a delicious piece of theater. They turned over to Germany and Russia the plots for the exhibits, and let human nature, as it develops, under dictatorship, take its course.

The German facade, a stately thing of enormously high columns, is topped by a crouching eagle; the approaches to the building lined with standards carrying vast flags with the swastika emblem.

Facing this, challenging it, seeming to shout at it, is the Russian pavilion. On its roof are two colossal figures of workers, a man and a woman, brandishing the sickle and hammer, heads thrown back, their silvered clothes streaming behind as they stride forward toward the German eagle. Each building is filled with the propaganda of its respective Utopia.

A short distance away is the Italian exhibit, a structure with a court of gray marble flanked by corridors decorated with terrifying frescoes of black clad, hollow-eyed spectres, which might be creatures brought up from an inferno, but which were created to represent the triumphal march of Fascism. A horrific head of Mussolini, all bronze helmet, knotted jaw muscles and scowl, glares across the court toward a similar but slightly smaller bronze head of King Victor Emmanuel, whom even the big man sculptors of the new Rome could give nothing worse than a mild and quizzical grimace. Inside, in the great restaurant, a Milanese orchestra plays the scores of Puccini, a comely woman hums the same airs as she rolls out the golden dough for ravioli, pretty little peasant girls in costume hurry about with bottles of the warm wines of Capri and the Campagna. The three exhibits are the com-

Miss Joy Steele Becomes Bride Of Lattimer Lewis At Presbyterian Church

Prominent Families United By Ceremony

Misses Shotwell, Gray, Stubbs And Williams Bridesmaids; Reception Is Held

The First Presbyterian church, cool and shadowy and fragrant with the perfume of myriad Madonna lilies, was the scene of a fashionable wedding Tuesday, August the third, when Miss Joy Steele, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell Steele, and Mr. Lattimer Lafitte Lewis, son of Mrs. Lula Boyce Lewis and the late George Clement Lewis of Tuscaloosa, Ala., repeated their marriage vows before a lily banked altar at nine-thirty o'clock in the morning.

Tall, classic shaped urns of white satin porcelain, handles tied with wide satin ribbon and placed in prominent position on the white covered dais, overflowed with superb white Madonna lilies and anemones. Southern smulax trailed its length over chancel rail and choir loft and formed a solid curtain of lush green in the background. Lilies tied with fluffs of silvery tulle adorned the pews reserved for members of the family and a few intimate friends.

Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church, officiated in the absence of Rev. Ernest Holloway, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

The bridegroom's attendants, in white linens, de rigueur of southern summer weddings, were Mr. Herbert Lewis of Tuscaloosa, best man, and Messrs. Owen Merideth, Arthur Tidwell, Jr., James C. Steele, Jr., and John Williams, groomsmen. All wore boutonnieres of white valley lilies.

While the audience was being seated, Miss Nellie Beard sang in splendid voice "Because" and "O Promise Me," accompanied by Mr. Leon Hammond, organist.

The bridesmaids, Misses Pollyanna Shotwell, Louise Gray, Carolyn Stubbs and Elizabeth Williams, wore exquisite period gowns of Wedgwood blue chiffon by Emily. The basques were extremely tight with short puffed sleeves and square neck edged with Alencon. The hooped skirts were long and full and caught up gracefully with a single blue blossom.

Beauteous peacock bonnets of blue were worn and the flowers they carried, pink roses, blue forget-me-nots and yellow achilles, hinted of old-fashioned gardens. A fluting of rose point lace encircled each round bouquet.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Vernon LaCour, of Thibadeaux, wore a gown of coral, an exact duplicate of those worn by the bridesmaids.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her fur-belled gown of white chiffon by Emily. The hooped skirt was looped in the most engaging manner with white blossoms. The bodice was tight fitting with square neck and high standing collar of rose point lace. Lace edged the short puffed sleeves and formed the cap from which a white tulle veil fell to the edge of the skirt. Her bouquet was fashioned of white orchids, valley lilies and anemones with lengths of white satin ribbons caught with valley lilies. For something old she wore the handsome heirloom diamond ring presented to her by her father.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Steele home with a few intimate friends and members of the family in attendance. Mrs. Steele, the bride's charming mother, standing with the wedding party, wore a white crepe model with buttercup yellow felt hat and corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Lewis, the bridegroom's mother, wore a navy blue ensemble with all accessories blue and a corsage of white gardenias.

The double heart-shaped wedding cake embossed in valley lilies, surrounded with a cupid, was placed on a table in the flower banked dining room and cut by the bride before departure. The coffee table, overlaid with handsome Renaissance lace and adorned with superb white roses, was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Feazel, in a pastel pink lace model and wide brimmed pink felt hat.

Individual wedding cakes, embossed in lilies, were served.

The bride changed her wedding gown for a smart advanced fall tailleur of navy blue, light weight wool, with handsome gray fox collar. A corsage of orchids created a note of distinction.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis will spend their honeymoon on the gulf coast, and later will be at home in Tuscaloosa, where Mr. Lewis is engaged in business.

Mrs. Lewis, an outstanding figure in Monroe's younger social circle, is a graduate of Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss., and the University of Alabama. She is a member of Alpha Gamma, national sorority, and Delta social sorority.

Mrs. Lewis is a descendant of two old southern families. Her great-grandparents settled in Ouachita and Union parishes before the war between the states. Her mother, formerly Miss Anna Hill, was born in Union parish and has resided in this vicinity all of her life.

Mrs. Lewis' father is a prominent figure in civic and industrial circles of this city. He is president of the J. C. Steele Lumber company and a director of the People's Building and Loan association.

Mr. Lewis, on his paternal side, is a direct descendant of the Lewis family of Fredericksburg, Va., famed for the Lewis and Clarke expedition. His father was the son of Charles L. Lewis and Marie Lafitte Lewis, who was the daughter of the historical John B. Lafitte of Paris, France. Mr. Lewis' maternal grandfather, J. P. Boyce, of Scotland, who settled in Charleston, S. C., was president of the Kentucky Baptist Theological seminary for many years.

Mr. Lewis attended the University of Alabama and Baylor University in Texas.

Prominent among the handsome gifts of silver, china, mahogany, linens and crystal was the liqueur set of blown glass handed down from John B. Lafitte and in possession of the Lewis family for 100 years.

Misses Mary Gretchen and Addie Nell Rainbolt have returned from a visit with their aunt, Mrs. N. Rutherford, of Dallas.

pleted parts of the exhibition, so magnificently conceived, so haltingly executed. At night the green bronze tower of peace fades until only the star above is visible. This is to remain permanently, a landmark for marauding airplanes in the next conflict. The Russian, the Italian, the German pavilions are bathed in floodlight, and the bed of the Seine suddenly and miraculously leaps into the air in hundreds of geysers, illuminated by lights actually hidden below the surface of the river, changing to 20 pastel shades in as many seconds. From amber, they become aquamarine, heliotrope, rose, pearl, then a blending of all together before they sink again to the surface of the river.

This effect of light on water probably has never been equaled. The Eiffel tower, for the first time in its existence is a thing of amazing beauty, a structure of golden lace. Off to the side, unfinished, unopened, deserted, is the pavilion of the United States.

Monroe people returning home from abroad found the most dramatic sight in all Europe was the river Seine, in the shadow of Eiffel tower in Paris, where the International exposition is now taking place.

In place of the old Trocadero, where the ground rises sharply from the right bank of the river, the builders of their International exposition have erected a circular tower of bronzy green metal, surmounted by a many-pointed star. The word Pax is carved in the metal of the tower. Beneath it are the pavilions of the organizations devoted to world peace.

Five hundred yards away, down the broad stairways, past the court of fountains, the pavilions of Nazi Germany and Bolshevik Russia face each other in architectural defiance. All Europe has seen this symbolic gesture. The French with their instinct for drama are responsible for a delicious piece of theater. They turned over to Germany and Russia the plots for the exhibits, and let human nature, as it develops under dictatorship, take its course.

Farmers And Wives Will Visit Mansion

Those Attending Short Course Will Be Entertained By Governor And Mrs. Leche

Louisiana farmers and their wives will wander in the executive mansion at Baton Rouge next Thursday afternoon when Governor Richard W. Leche and the state's first lady entertain those attending the annual short course at Louisiana State University with an informal reception.

Because nearly 1,500 guests are expected for the event, one of the largest groups ever to assemble at the mansion, Mrs. Leche is in the midst of plans for welcoming the farm folk on their first official visit to the mansion and is determined that everything will go off with clock-like precision, as customary at Louisiana's White House since Mrs. Leche became mistress there slightly more than a year ago.

The upstairs rooms will not be open to the guests under the present plan but the entire downstairs will be open for the farmers and their wives.

According to the Baton Rouge State Times the mansion just now is most attractive with summer draperies and coverings used for the first time in its history.

White organdy curtains and summer coverings have given a new appearance to the mansion. The heavy rugs and velvet draperies have given way to bare tiled floors and organdies. In the east room the ruffled curtains touch the floor and the massive furniture has been covered with oyster-white Indian head bound with the same material in eggplant. In order to give a note of color four of the largest chairs are covered with flowing silk poplin whose background is of eggplant hue. Pillows on the other chairs are in the flowered material which is extremely vivid with morning glories, roses, dahlias and what not running riot.

Adding another note of coolness to the east room are the flower boxes in each window, containing caladiums and ferns and other green plants. The tiled floor is highly polished and the whole effect is one of simple charm, the chair coverings being severely tailored.

Giving dignity are the stands on either side of the fireplace, on which are placed two of the governor's prized possessions, a pair of black bronze horses, given him by a friend. The horses came from England and are perfect in the East room.

The visitors will go from the east room to the dining room where ornate curtains are used charmingly. Here the chairs are covered with apple-green Indian head, also bound in eggplant hue. The gold molding at the top is covered with material in a matching shade of green.

Farmers And Wives Will Visit Mansion

Those Attending Short Course Will Be Entertained By Governor And Mrs. Leche

Louisiana farmers and their wives will wander in the executive mansion at Baton Rouge next Thursday afternoon when Governor Richard W. Leche and the state's first lady entertain those attending the annual short course at Louisiana State university with an informal reception.

Because nearly 1,500 guests are expected for the event, one of the largest groups ever to assemble at the mansion, Mrs. Leche is in the midst of plans for welcoming the farm folk on their first official visit to the mansion and is determined that everything will go off with clock-like precision, as customary at Louisiana's White House since Mrs. Leche became mistress there slightly more than a year ago.

The upstairs rooms will not be open to the guests under the present plans but the entire downstairs will be open for the farmers and their wives.

According to the Baton Rouge State Times the mansion just now is most attractive with summer draperies and coverings used for the first time in its history.

White organdy curtains and summer coverings have given a new appearance to the mansion. The heavy rugs and velvet draperies have given way to bare tiled floors and organdies. In the east room the ruffled curtains touch the floor and the massive furniture has been covered with oyster-white Indian head bound with the same material in eggplant.

In Mrs. Leche's own words the whole affair will be extremely simple with everything designed to make the farmers and their wives thoroughly enjoy their visit. The entire lower floor of the mansion will be thrown open to the visitors, giving them a chance to inspect the downstairs rooms, attractive now in their summer garb.

morning glories, roses, dahlias and what not running riot.

Adding another note of coolness to the east room are the flower boxes in each window, containing caleadiums and ferns and other green plants. The tiled floor is highly polished and the whole effect is one of simple charm, the chair coverings being severely tailored.

Giving dignity are the stands on either side of the fireplace, on which are placed two of the governor's prized possessions, a pair of black bronze horses, given him by a friend. The horses came from England and are perfect in the East room.

The visitors will go from the east room to the dining room where ornate curtains are used charmingly. Here the chairs are covered with apple-green Indian head, also bound in material in eggplant hue. The gold molding at the top is covered with material in a matching shade of green.

Farmers And Wives Will Visit Mansion

Those Attending Short Course Will Be Entertained By Governor And Mrs. Leche

Louisiana farmers and their wives will wander in the executive mansion at Baton Rouge next Thursday afternoon when Governor Richard W. Leche and the state's first lady entertain those attending the annual short course at Louisiana State University with an informal reception.

Because nearly 1,500 guests are expected for the event, one of the largest groups ever to assemble at the mansion, Mrs. Leche is in the midst of plans for welcoming the farm folk on their first official visit to the mansion and is determined that everything will go off with clock-like precision, as customary at Louisiana's White House since Mrs. Leche became mistress there slightly more than a year ago.

The mansion party, which will be a feature of the short course program this year, will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and will be on the rolling front lawn of the mansion. Mrs. Leche and the governor will stand near the stately pillars at the front entrance to receive the guests and Louisiana's first lady will be wearing a chic sports frock of black and white figured silk. In Mrs. Leche's own words the whole affair will be extremely simple with everything designed to make the farm and their wives thoroughly enjoy their visit. The entire lower floor of the mansion will be thrown open to the visitors, giving them a chance to inspect the downstairs rooms, attractive now in their summer garb.

Long tables bearing delectable sandwiches and cooling drinks will be spread outside and here refreshments will be served the guests under the simplest arrangement possible.

"And we are only praying that it won't rain," Mrs. Leche said, "because in case it does we will receive the farmers and their wives in the east room and I'm afraid the guests won't be able to see the mansion so well because it will be so crowded. But if they are received outside they can go through in smaller groups and see all there is to see."

The upstairs rooms will not be open to the guests under the present plans but the entire downstairs will be open for the farmers and their wives.

According to the Baton Rouge State Times the mansion just now is most attractive with summer draperies and coverings used for the first time in its history.

Very organdy curtains and summer coverings have given a new appearance to the mansion. The heavy ruffs and velvet draperies have given way to bare tiled floors and organdies. In the east room the ruffled curtains touch the floor and the massive furniture has been covered with oyster-white Indian head bound with the same material in eggplant. In order to give a note of color four of the largest chairs are covered with flowered silk poplin whose background is of eggplant hue. Pillows on the other chairs are in the flowered material which is extremely vivid with morning glories, roses, dahlias and what not running riot.

Adding another note of coolness to the east room are the flower boxes in each window, containing caladiums and ferns and other green plants. The tiled floor is highly polished and the whole effect is one of simple charm, the chair coverings being severely tailored.

Giving dignity are the stands on either side of the fireplace, on which are placed two of the governor's prized possessions, a pair of black bronze horses, given him by a friend. The horses come from England and are perfect in the East room.

The visitors will go from the east room to the dining room where organdy curtains are used charmingly. Here the chairs are covered with apple green Indian head, also bound in material in eggplant hue. The gold molding at the top is covered with material in a matching shade of green.

READ THESE RULES CAREFULLY

1—Think of your suggestion for naming the little Snowdrift men pictured here. "Bake and Fry," for instance; or the "Freshness Twins"; the "Creaminess Boys"; "Snow and Drift" or "The Goodness Team." Write your suggestion on any kind of paper or on the entry blank. Print plainly your name and address, and name and address of your grocer.

2—Buy a can of Snowdrift. Unwind the metal strip which says "We lock in all its goodness." Enclose this piece of strip paper with your suggestion and address, and mail to "Award Editor, P. O. Box 994, New Orleans, La." That constitutes an entry. Entries will not be considered unless metal strip accompanies each name suggestion. For example, "Bake and Fry" needs one strip; "The Creaminess Boys" one strip.

3—Every entry, duly accompanied by metal strip, will be acknowledged, and in appreciation we will give you a coupon acceptable by your grocer as 10¢ against the purchase of your next 3 or 6 pound can of Snowdrift. Because of the large number of suggestions, we cannot enter into any further correspondence with any entrant. No entry will be returned.

Judging will be directed by officials of the Calkins & Holden Advertising Agency, New York, or the Fitzgerald Advertising Agency of New Orleans. Decisions of the judges will be final. Anyone may submit suggestions, in conformity with the rules, except employees of the Wesson Oil & Snowdrift People, their advertising agencies, or their families.

'Kid' Dancing Party Held At Lakeside Country Club By Delta Beta Sigmas

Younger Set Greatly Enjoys Rustic Party

Miss Virginia Buckner, Richard Pierce And Henry Biedenharn, Jr., Win Costume Prizes

Not even the terrific heat which descended on us last week was able to daunt the younger set. The sole effect it had was to take the formal note out of entertainment, with the great open spaces supplying the background rather than the austerity of private homes and night clubs.

Swimming and boating were the regular daily program last week with a "kid" dancing party sponsored by Delta Beta Sigma sorority Thursday night at Lakeside Country club sufficiently rustic to please even those who balk at summer dances. Ginghams and curls, knee breeches and blouses, were very much in evidence, with the prizes of the evening going to Miss Virginia Buckner and Richard Pierce for the most realistic costumes, and to Henry Biedenharn, Jr., for the most original costume.

Among the dancers were noted: Betty Jane Pierce and Ginger Bubb, Margaret Butler and Roger Lanson, Mary Rolleigh and Raleigh Whitehead, Betty Keller and Charles Wiles, Jr., Winnie Bredard and James Gremillion, Mack Fay Hammons, Gretchen Rainbolt, Earlene Wilson, Octave Register, Dot Tippit, Dot Darte, Jane Burgess, Inez Rhynes, Theda Gray.

Chaperones were: Mrs. L. P. Landry, Mrs. J. T. Conger, Mrs. Reese Major, Jr., Mrs. Roy Hale, Mrs. Robert Holloway, Mrs. James Phelps, Mrs. C. R. Russell, Mrs. Frank Farmer, Mrs. Curtis Seaman, Mrs. Alfred Reid, Mrs. Bennett.

INSURED PLAN LIQUIDITY SEEN BY BANK'S HEAD

Cities Insurance Company's
Mortgage Purchase As
Tribute To FHA

NEWARK, N. J.—The ease and facility with which 23 insured mortgages were recently sold to the National Life Insurance company of Montpelier, Vt., is a graphic example of the "fundamental liquidity afforded these loans by the underlying government sponsorship and supervision," according to Harry Van Hook, cashier of the Prospect Park (N. J.) National bank.

Commenting on the sale of 23 insured mortgages sold to the insurance company without recourse on a 4½ per cent basis, Elbert S. Brigham, vice-president and chairman of the committee on finance of the insurance company, stated:

"We consider these, on the basis of information submitted, a very choice group of loans, and we are glad to know that you will furnish us $30,000 per month additional in the future."

Harry Van Hook, cashier, then stated:

"Such a statement from an experienced and conservative life-insurance company mortgage lender is, indeed, a tribute to the Federal Housing Administration's plan of mortgage financing. The ease and facility with which this transaction was concluded is a convincing demonstration of the fundamental liquidity afforded these loans by the underlying government sponsorship and supervision."

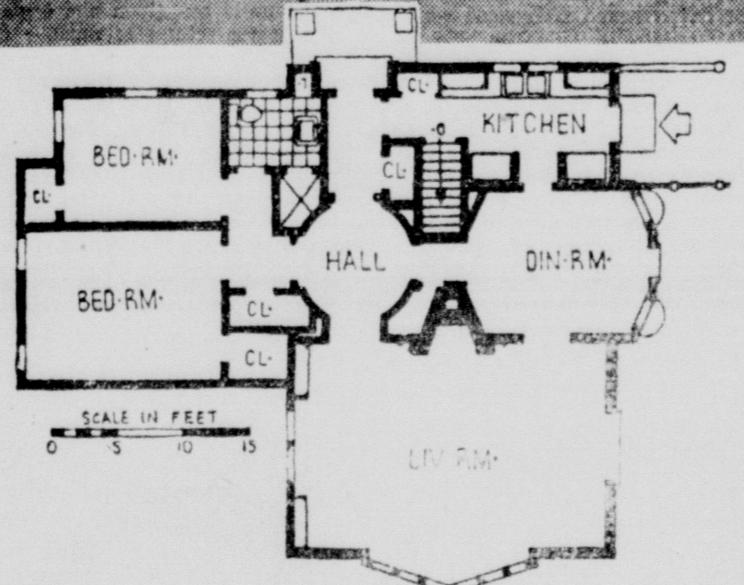

"Moreover the margin of 1 per cent remaining with the bank is certainly not an unwelcome addition to income in these days of reduced bank earnings. Of course, this 1 per cent is not all velvet as the cost of servicing should be considered, but we are confident that at least enough income will result to absorb the total cost of handling all loans insured under the provisions of the national housing act including those in our own portfolio. Considering then, that the whole return from our insured mortgages and modernization loans will be practically all net income, we have an average return of over 7 per cent on loans with an average maturity of 5 years, which is mighty sweet compared to the present yield of 1½ per cent on 5-year government bonds to which these loans could be likened."

VARNISH LINOLEUM

Summer is an appropriate time to varnish the kitchen linoleum. Saturday morning, just before leaving for the week-end, the floor may be varnished and the work done at this time will not interfere with the efficiency of the household.

It is always advisable to varnish or lacquer new printed linoleum, both to preserve it and to simplify the cleaning of it.

There's Something Grand About This Spacious Plan

For a small home, this one achieves that spacious feeling to a marked degree. It also has an air of undeniable grandeur.

A large window, extending from the floor almost to the ceiling, makes the living room quite distinctive and wonderfully light and cheerful. It has built-in bookcases in two corners.

Private Home Can Be Protected Against Fire By New Sprinkler

A midget sprinkler system for the small home has recently been perfected which gives automatic protection against fire to the residence in the same way that commercial and industrial structures are protected.

The system can easily be installed under the ceiling of any basement. It is connected to the domestic water supply and is piped with soft copper tubing installed in a loop. The loop traverses the entire basement and thus produces an even distribution of water and pressure, no matter where the operating sprinkler may be.

The sprinkler heads are held tightly shut by a quartz bulb which will open only when subjected to a temperature of 135 degrees. When the bulb opens water issues from the

Worktables Give Housewife New Cooking Aids

Built-in worktables and cabinets have supplanted the old-fashioned kitchen table in many modern homes, many modern homes. Many styles are possible. Important requirements, however, are substantial tight construction, affording no harbors for household pests, materials that are easily kept sanitary; drawers and compartments of adequate size and shape to accommodate the articles to be stored in them. The modern, built-in kitchen cabinet or worktable may be built with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the Federal Housing Administration's modernization credit plan. Many housewives have found such an investment more than pays for itself in convenience and cleanliness.

VENETIAN BLINDS
Old-fashioned Venetian blinds are now appearing in increasing numbers in modern homes and apartments. These, however, are no longer in the standard green but are presented in a whole range of pastel colors. Many householders repaint their Venetian blinds in tints which harmonize with the interior decoration of their rooms.

Watch the roof and prevent accumulation of leaves and twigs.

REFUNDED MORTGAGE BUSINESS IMPROVES

WARREN, Pa.—Marked increase is noted in this section in the refunding of mortgages by banks, according to the Federal Housing Administration district director. In one day, recently, the Warren Bank and Trust Co. submitted 32 projects to the district office.

A similar program is being contemplated by the First National Bank of Warren, which expects to submit 60 projects in the near future.

LEAKS IN FLASHING

If a leak occurs around dormers or near the valleys of a roof or over the windows, the chances are there is a break somewhere in the flashing. Examine the suspected area carefully. Possibly there is a tiny hair crack due to the expansion and contraction of the metal. It may be a break in a soldered joint. It may be deterioration of the metal itself due to corrosion. Hair cracks can sometimes be patched and soldered, and broken joints can be resoldered, but corroded metal must be replaced.

Another possibility, particularly in gutters and crickets or flat decks, is that the drainage has become clogged and water has backed up under the roof covering past the top of the flashing.

Watch the roof and prevent accumulation of leaves and twigs.

BANKS ACCEPT 'OUT OF TOWN' MORTGAGE PAPER

Practice Indicates Lenders
Consider Plan Is Financially Sound

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Acceptance by institutional investors of the safety factors furnished by the appraisal, risk-rating methods and insurance features adopted by the Federal Housing Administration for residence mortgages is to be seen, according to Administrator Stewart McDonald, in the growing volume of business being done by approved lending institutions located outside of the city wherein a property is situated.

A recent example was that reported by J. M. Dockery, Federal Housing administration district manager in the Chattanooga, Tenn., office. Mortgages in the amount of $218,000 had been selected for appraisal, but the local banking institutions declined to give them consideration.

The Fidelity Bankers Trust company of Knoxville, Tenn., acting as agent for an eastern investment house, stepped into the picture, as did a Chattanooga insurance company, and together they relieved the mortgage jamb so that $200,000 worth of the paper was financed in a day. According to Mr. Dockery, with but two exceptions all of the mortgages that had been accepted for appraisal met with approval and were financed.

The timely entrance of outside capital has caused mortgage money to flow freely in Chattanooga, the housing administration has been informed, that office now having insured more than $600,000 worth of mortgages.

Further, the Fidelity Bankers Trust company states that the institution which they represent wishes to purchase an additional $2,000,000 worth of insured mortgages.

In Toledo, O., arrangements have been completed for refinancing $200,000 in residence mortgages held by the closed Commerce Guardian Trust and Savings bank through the new Commerce Guardian bank. The state banking department is selecting from the closed bank's assets mortgages that will meet with the Federal Housing administration's requirements as to credit standing, ability to pay and condition of the property. Not only will this afford a safe investment outlet for the bank but it will speed up the liquidation of the closed institution, it was pointed out.

A survey of home loans in the portfolios of other closed Ohio institutions is being made, with the view of casting the sound mortgages that can be made to conform with housing administration's requirements for insurance. Funds for this refinancing of home mortgages have been offered by institutions in cities other than that in which the actual property involved is located, it is reported.

One of the purposes for instituting a uniform method of appraisal and risk rating by the Federal Housing administration was to enable sections wherein there was a demand for mortgage money that exceeded the available supply to obtain funds from other localities where there was an excess of funds.

That such a method has been arrived at by the housing administration in its appraisals is becoming the conviction of financial institutions throughout the country, as is evidenced by their growing willingness to deal in mortgages on property in other sections when such mortgages are based on housing administration appraisals and insured.

LUMBER BUSINESS BOOMS IN DAKOTA

WATFORD CITY, N. D.—John Ostrom, manager of the Mid-West Lumber yard here, has found it impossible to take a vacation because of the volume of business generated during recent months in this area, which suffered severely during the drought.

Every available man in this section who can swing a hammer and wield a shovel is busy. A labor shortage existed this year where there was an excess during the previous three years.

NERVES, DECIBELS

Noise which jangles the nerves reduces efficiency and undermines health is spoken of by acoustical engineers in terms of decibels. Roughly, a decibel corresponds to the slightest change in loudness that can be distinguished by the human ear. The decibel scale is somewhat like the temperature scale on a thermometer, although an intricate machine is needed in measuring these little units. A quiet home registers about 30 decibels of sound. Fifty decibels is not disturbing, but noise in excess of 70 decibels should not be tolerated because of the harm it does to a person. Acoustical treatment always lowers the decibel reading in a room.

Modernize for Profit

Provisions of the revised Modernization Credit Plan make it possible for owners of grocery and delicatessen shops to obtain funds on a long-term repayment basis with which to purchase modern equipment and machinery. Up-to-date refrigerated show cases, as illustrated above, add to the general appearance as well as the "sales appeal" of the food store of today. New wall effects and other interior improvements are also possible under the plan in many cases. Store owners have realized increased profits through modernization, more than ample to take care of monthly payments on such loans.

Modern Elevators Prove Aid Progressive Store Owner

To enter a store or commercial building and be ushered into an old-fashioned cage for an elevator cab immediately gives the visitor the impression that here is a place that is years behind the times. He wonders whether the merchandise is on the shelves as long as this cab has been running. He surely is not inspired with the idea that the latest and most up-to-date of anything could be found in such a building.

A management that tolerates such old-fashioned equipment surely would not be alive to the latest and best in what it has to sell.

He also feels an uneasiness as to the actual safety of such a contraption. He instinctively looks for the certificate of the underwriters to see the date of the last inspection and glances apprehensively at the various cables and chains that slap against the open sides of the cab and wonders whether or not they have reached the time of life when they are ready to quit their jobs and retire to the peace and quiet of the scrap heap. He sends up a fervent prayer that they may with hold their decisions at least until he

FENCING GUARDS THE PLANTS FROM VANDALS

Home gardening is fast becoming the chief hobby of at least one member of every American family owning a lot large enough to turn around on. It's fun to lay out a garden, plant, and watch different kinds of flowers and shrubs develop and bloom; but there are plenty of adversaries, particularly from stray animals and from vandals who cannot resist the temptation to pick anybody's flowers and to trample down vines and plants getting what they want.

No one wants to exclude the public from enjoyment of flowers and hedge rows, but it is often necessary to put up some barrier against trespassers who thoughtlessly or maliciously destroy in a short time the devoted work and care of many weeks. These fences or walls should be as beautiful as possible, designed to harmonize with the landscaping scheme of the garden itself.

SOUND DEADENERS

One way to deaden the sounds within a house is to place pads of insulating material at all points where construction members come together; for example, a pad under each stud or under floor joists where they rest on their supports.

Then the floors should be floated. A floated floor is built thus: Over the joists a pad of sound-deadening material is placed and nailed. Then furring strips are placed over each beam and nailed at about 24-inch intervals. A second pad may be put on, or the finish floor may be placed directly over the strips.

Deadening under the laths of the ceiling will also help.

One method to deaden partitions is to stagger the studs so that there is no direct connection between the walls of the two rooms. Sound-deadening material should then be woven between the backs of the studs.

Proper Light In Kitchens Aids Housewife

Adequate artificial lighting is a necessity in the modern kitchen at the stove, sink, table and other work centers. Such lights should be so arranged as to prevent glare and in such a way that a housewife will never be required to work in her own shadow. In new construction the lighting arrangement of a kitchen deserves careful consideration. Any competent electrical contractor can give expert advice how to convert the lighting arrangement in an existing kitchen so as to produce the maximum in comfort and convenience. Funds with which to install modern lighting systems in kitchens may be obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

Many Stars In Cast Of Musical Hit

New Screen Luminaries Make Film One Of Outstanding Pictures Of Year

AMUSICAL extravaganza featuring an unusual array of stage and radio talent, comes to the fore as a candidate for first spectacular and entertainment honors. In "New Faces of 1937," which opens at the Paramount today, RKO Radio believes it has augmented its plan to bring new faces to the screen with a strong story, worthy of the comedians who portray the principal characters.

"New Faces of 1937" has been produced as first of a series of yearly musicals. Under the permanent title of "New Faces," the series is to present new and promising talent from all fields of entertainment in elaborate musical comedy shows.

Featured roles are played currently by Joe Penner, Milton Berle, Parkyakarkas, Harriet Hilliard, Thelma Leeds, Jerome Cowen and William Brady.

Milton Berle, seasoned veteran of vaudeville, won his great following via the air lanes with his Gillette "Singtime" program. Parkyakarkas (Harry Einstein), formerly of Eddie Cantor's radio act and now with Al Jolson on the RKO program, appeared on the screen once before with Cantor in "Strike Me Pink." Joe Penner, another star of radio with his Cocomalt program, has appeared in "College Rhythm" and "Collegiate."

Miss Hilliard, of the "Bakers" radio program, scored in her screen debut.

"Follow the Fleet," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers starred Lowe, Hite & Stanley, a novelty dance team, present Hite, a giant of seven feet nine; Stanley, a midget of three feet two; and Lowe, of ordinary stature.

Eddie Rio and Brothers from the night clubs are an eccentric dance team. The Chocolaters, three negro boys who created the new dance sensation, "Peckin'," are also on the screen.

Dorothy Roberts, a hot singer, is from eastern vaudeville. Others include the Loria Brothers, a sensational singing, playing and dancing team of seven Mexican boys ranging in age from four to fourteen; the Four Playboys, formerly with Ben Bernie and his orchestra; Derry Dean, four-year-old tot who plays the violin, sings and dances; Catherine Brent, lovely young operatic singer, Tommy Mack and Bert Gordon, both of Berle's radio show, and Ann Miller, sensational tap dancer.

William Brady, male romantic lead, was discovered in a New York night club as was Thelma Leeds. He is making his screen debut as a singer, while Miss Leeds has also a prominent part in "The Toast of New York," melodramatic romance. Lorraine Krueger had done bit dancing for RKO Radio and as a result of her talents, wins her first principal role in "New Faces of 1937." Seven beautiful show girls are featured in the "New Faces" number of the show, Jerome Cowen was seen in "Shall We Dance," "Beloved Enemy" and "You Only Live Once."

PLANS MADE FOR Y. W. C. A. DRIVE

Date Decided At Board Meet-
ing; Mrs. Metcalf
Chairman

Plans were outlined at a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Young Women's Christian association for the holding of the fall drive which it was decided will be conducted on October 11. Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, treasurer of the board, will serve as chairman of the drive. Mrs. J. B. Kugler and Mrs. Frank Stubbs will serve with Mrs. Metcalf. Mrs. A. D. Tidale, president of the board, and Mrs. Julia Maria Arnold, executive secretary, will assist the drive committee.

The past week has been a busy one at the "Y." with numerous committee and club meetings conducted.

The Blue Triangle club held a supper on Monday night and on Thursday the same group entertained at the home of Louise Phillips on Stone street, the occasion being a handkerchief shower for Mrs. Lois Gray, retiring secretary. Miss Gray is leaving for a year of study in Illinois.

The "Y" residence girls met Wednesday night for their regular tap dancing class. These are given each week on the same night from 8 to 10 p. m.

The residence club is planning a homecoming day for all former girls and all who at any time resided at the "Y" are to be invited to attend.

Mrs. Mattie H. Crow has just completed her first month as house matron.

TRANSPORTATION TO CENTER WORKED OUT

Dean C. C. Colvert, of Northeast Center of Louisiana State university, is working on plans to aid in every possible way in the transportation of students to and from college from cities and towns in this section.

He stated that there has been considerable interest shown in Bastrop and vicinity in the operation of a bus to Northeast Center during the coming term.

There is also interest in cities and towns east and south of Monroe in the matter of transportation to and from the college.

In past years buses have operated from Bastrop, Rayville, Delhi, Olla and other places to bring students to college and to return them home at night.

The dean anticipates that there will be even a larger number to come back and forth this year than in past years. In order to work out a schedule, Dean Colvert asks that those interested notify him of their intentions and that the college will cooperate in every possible way to aid.

Indications are said to be for the enrollment of a larger number of students this fall than ever before at the local institution.

TWO BEER LICENSES REVOKED BY COUNCIL

Two licenses to sell beer which had been issued by the city of West Monroe were revoked by the city council at the August meeting of that body held this past week. The licenses are those of A. C. Hicks and Luther Furlow. Both are located on Commerce street, West Monroe, and the action taken was said to be because patrons of both places have allegedly given the police much trouble. J. C. Cobb, chief of police of West Monroe, informed the council that repeated efforts have been required to suppress trouble arising at both establishments.

It was stated at the council meeting that other licenses may be revoked if further trouble is had by police in other cases.

Weak, Dizzy Spells Hardly Get Around

Gly-Cas Unfailing; Man In Good Health Again; Stomach And Kidneys Functioning Normally—Aches And Pains Have Left His Body.

"I did not realize any medicine could accomplish as much as this new Gly-Cas has done for me," said Mr. G. C. Chambers, Route No. 5, Highway 135, Marshall, Tex. "For the past 12 years

MR. G. C. CHAMBERS

my kidneys annoyed me with night risings. It was an impossibility to get a good night's sleep. My back hurt so bad I could hardly stand it and I had such pains to run down into my right leg at times I thought they would surely kill me. I had also been badly constipated. Each meal I ate meant suffering afterwards with gas, bloating and sour stomach. My appetite finally failed completely and I would have weak, dizzy spells until I could hardly get around at all."

"But once I gave Gly-Cas an opportunity to help me all my health troubles were soon brought to an end," said Mr. Chambers. "From the first few doses Gly-Cas gave me desired results and now I can truthfully say I have never felt better in my life. I eat any type food I wish and they do not cause me any suffering afterwards. My kidneys are now regular, bowels corrected and I am a man in every way it seems. All sufferers should realize there is only ONE GLY-CAS and profit by it."

Gly-Cas is sold by Phoenix Drug company, 348 DeSiard street, this city, and by all leading drug stores in surrounding towns. —Adv.

Then Jesus said unto them: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." Then said they unto Him: "Lord, evermore give us this bread." ## INSURED PLAN LIQUIDITY SEEN BY BANK'S HEAD

Cities Insurance Company's
Mortgage Purchase As
Tribute To FHA

NEWARK, N. J.—The ease and facility with which 23 insured mortgages were recently sold to the National Life Insurance company of Montpelier, Vt., is a graphic example of the "fundamental" liquidity afforded these loans by the underlying government sponsorship and supervision.

"Moreover, the margin of 1 per cent remaining with the bank is certainly not an unwelcome addition to income in these days of reduced bank earnings. Of course, this 1 per cent is not all velvet as the cost of servicing should be considered, but we are confident that at least enough income will result to absorb the total cost of handling all loans insured under the provisions of the national housing act including those in our own portfolio. Considering then, that the whole return from our insured mortgages and modernization loans will be practically all net income, we have an average return of over 7 per cent on loans with an average maturity of 5 years, which is mighty sweet compared to the present yield of 1½ per cent on 5-year government bonds to which these loans could be likened."

VARNISH LINOLEUM

Summer is an appropriate time to varnish the kitchen linoleum. Saturday morning, just before leaving for the week-end, the floor may be varnished and the work done at this time will not interfere with the efficiency of the household.

It is always advisable to varnish or lacquer new printed linoleum, both to preserve it and to simplify the cleaning of it.

There's Something Grand About This Spacious Plan

For a small home, this one achieves that spacious feeling to a marked degree. It also has an air of undeniable grandeur.

A large window, extending from the floor almost to the ceiling, makes the living room quite distinctive and wonderfully light and cheerful. It has built-in bookcases in two corners.

Private Home Can Be Protected Against Fire By New Sprinkler

A midget sprinkler system for the small home has recently been perfected which gives automatic protection against fire to the residence in the same way that commercial and industrial structures are protected.

The system can easily be installed under the ceiling of any basement. It is connected to the domestic water supply and is piped with soft copper tubing installed in a loop. The loop traverses the entire basement and thus produces an even distribution of water and pressure, no matter where the operating sprinkler may be.

The sprinkler heads are held tightly shut by a quartzoid bulb which will open only when subjected to a temperature of 135 degrees. When the bulb opens water issues from the

Worktables Give Housewife New Cooking Aids

Built-in worktables and cabinets have supplanted the old-fashioned kitchen table in many modern homes, many modern homes. Many styles are possible. Important requirements, however, are substantial tight construction, affording no harbors for household pests, materials that are easily kept sanitary; drawers and compartments of adequate size and shape to accommodate the articles to be stored in them. The modern, built-in kitchen cabinet or worktable may be built with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the Federal Housing Administration's modernization credit plan. Many housewives have found such an investment more than pays for itself in convenience and cleanliness.

VENETIAN BLINDS

Old-fashioned Venetian blinds are now appearing in increasing numbers in modern homes and apartments. These, however, are no longer in the standard green, but are presented in a whole range of pastel colors. Many households repaint their Venetian blinds in tints which harmonize with the interior decoration of their rooms.

REFUNDED MORTGAGE BUSINESS IMPROVES

WARREN, Pa.—Marked increase is noted in this section in the refunding of mortgages by banks, according to the Federal Housing Administration district director. In one day, recently, the Warren Bank and Trust Co. submitted 32 projects to the district office.

A similar program is being contemplated by the First National Bank of Warren, which expects to submit 60 projects in the near future.

LEAKS IN FLASHING

If a leak occurs around dormers or near the valleys of a roof or over the windows, the chances are there is a leak somewhere in the flashing.

Examining the suspected area carefully, possibly there is a tiny hair crack due to the expansion and contraction of the metal. It may be a break in a soldered joint. It may be deterioration of the metal itself due to corrosion.

Hair cracks can sometimes be patched and soldered, and broken joints can be resoldered, but corroded metal must be replaced.

Another possibility, particularly in gutters and crickets or flat decks, is that the drainage has become clogged and water has backed up under the roof covering past the top of the flashing.

Watch the roof and prevent accumulation of leaves and twigs.

BANKS ACCEPT 'OUT OF TOWN' MORTGAGE PAPER

Practice Indicates Lenders
Consider Plan Is Financially Sound

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Acceptance by institutional investors of the safety factors furnished by the appraisal, risk-rating methods and insurance features adopted by the Federal Housing Administration for residence mortgages is to be seen, according to Administrator Stewart McDonald, in the growing volume of business being done by approved lending institutions located outside of the city wherein a property is situated.

A recent example was that reported by J. M. Dockery, Federal Housing administration district manager in the Chattanooga, Tenn., office. Mortgages in the amount of $218,000 had been selected for appraisal, but the local banking institutions declined to give them consideration.

The Fidelity Bankers Trust company of Knoxville, Tenn., acting as agent for an eastern investment house, stepped into the picture, as did a Chattanooga insurance company, and together they relieved the mortgage jamb so that $200,000 worth of the paper was financed in a day. According to Mr. Dockery, with but two exceptions all of the mortgages that had been accepted for appraisal met with approval and were financed.

The Fidelity Bankers Trust company of Knoxville, Tenn., acting as agent for an eastern investment house, stepped into the picture, as did a Chattanooga insurance company, and together they relieved the mortgage jamb so that $200,000 worth of the paper was financed in a day. According to Mr. Dockery, with but two exceptions all of the mortgages that had been accepted for appraisal met with approval and were financed.

The Fidelity Bankers Trust company states that the institution which they represent wishes to purchase an additional $2,000,000 worth of insured mortgages.

In Toledo, O., arrangements have been completed for refinancing $200,000 in residence mortgages held by the closed Commerce Guardian Trust and Savings Bank through the new Commerce Guardian Bank. The state banking department is selecting from the closed bank's assets mortgages that will meet with the Federal Housing administration's requirements as to administration, ability to pay and condition of the property. Not only will this afford a safe investment outlet for the bank but it will speed up the liquidation of the closed institution, it was pointed out.

A survey of home loans in the portfolios of other closed Ohio institutions is being made, with the view of re-casting the sound mortgages that can be made to conform with housing administration's requirements for insurance.

Funds for this refinancing of home mortgages have been offered by institutions in cities other than that in which the actual property involved is located, it is reported.

One of the purposes for instituting a uniform method of appraisal and risk rating by the Federal Housing administration was to enable sections wherein there was a demand for mortgage money that exceeded the available supply to obtain funds from other localities where there was an excess of funds.

That such a method has been arrived at by the housing administration in its appraisals is becoming the conviction of financial institutions throughout the country, as is evidenced by their growing willingness to deal in mortgages on property in other sections when such mortgages are based on housing administration appraisals and insured.

LEAKS IN FLASHING

If a leak occurs around dormers or near the valleys of a roof or over the windows, the chances are there is a leak somewhere in the flashing.

Possibly there is a tiny hair crack due to the expansion and contraction of the metal. It may be a break in a soldered joint. It may be deterioration of the metal itself due to corrosion.

Hair cracks can sometimes be patched and soldered, and broken joints can be resoldered, but corroded metal must be replaced.

Another possibility, particularly in gutters and crickets or flat decks, is that the drainage has become clogged and water has backed up under the roof covering past the top of the flashing.

Watch the roof and prevent accumulation of leaves and twigs.

LUMBER BUSINESS

BOOMS IN DAKOTA

WATFORD CITY, N. D.—John Ostrom, manager of the Mid-West Lumber yard here, has found it impossible to take a vacation because of the volume of business generated during recent months in this area, which suffered severely during the drought.

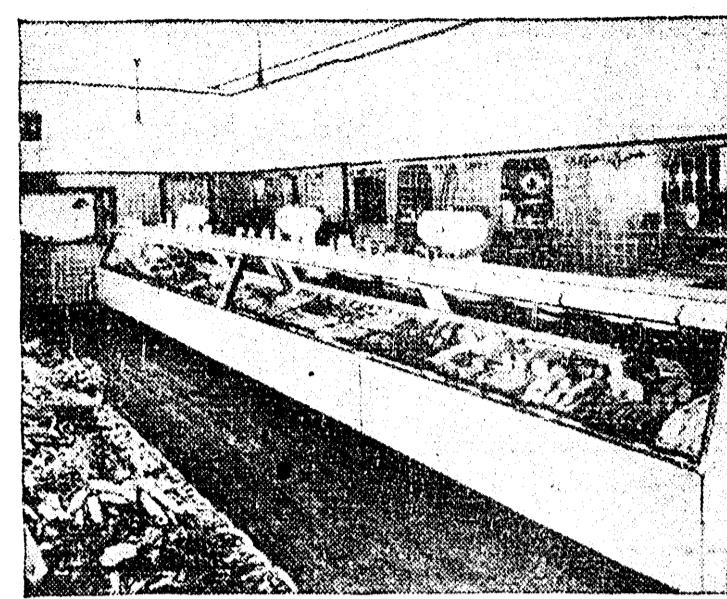

Every available man in this section who can swing a hammer and wield a shovel is busy. A labor shortage existed this year where there was an excess during the previous three years.

NERVES, DECIBELS

Noise which jangles the nerves reduces efficiency and undermines health is spoken of by acoustical engineers in terms of decibels. Roughly, a decibel corresponds to the slightest change in loudness that can be distinguished by the human ear. The decibel scale is somewhat like the temperature scale on a thermometer, although an intricate machine is needed in measuring these little units.

A quiet home registers about 40 decibels of sound. Fifty decibels is not disturbing, but noise in excess of 70 decibels should not be tolerated because of the harm it does to a person. Acoustical treatment always lowers the decibel reading in a room.

Proper Light In Kitchens Aids Housewife

Adequate artificial lighting is a necessity in the modern kitchen at the stove, sink, table and other work centers. Such lights should be so arranged as to prevent glare and in such a way that a housewife will never be required to work in her own shadow. In new construction the lighting arrangement of a kitchen deserves careful consideration. Any competent electrical contractor can give expert advice how to convert the lighting arrangement in an existing kitchen so as to produce the maximum in comfort and convenience. Funds with which to install modern lighting systems in kitchens may be obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

Modern Elevators Prove Aid Progressive Store Owner

To enter a store or commercial gets safely down to solid ground again. And when at last he steps out at the ground floor he inadvertently catches a sight of relief and makes a mental note that hereafter he will go to some other establishment or use the phone.

A complete renovation of the elevator equipment will do more toward renewing the youthful appearance of a building than almost any other facing-lift or renovating operation. Purchase and installation of such equipment as possible under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration through credit advanced by private financial institutions insured by the government.

He also feels an unceasing as to the actual safety of such a contraption. He instinctively looks for the certificate of the underwriters to see the date of the last inspection and glances apprehensively at the various cables and chains that snap against the open sides of the cab and wonders whether or not they have reached the time of life when they are ready to quit their jobs and retire to the peace and quiet of the scrap heap. He seals up a fervent prayer that they may withhold their decisions at least until he

Home gardening is fast becoming the chief hobby of at least one member of every American family owning a lot large enough to turn around on. It's fun to put a garden plant and watch different kinds of flowers and shrubs develop and blossom, but there are plenty of adversaries, particularly from stray animals and from vandals who cannot resist the temptation to pick anybody's flowers and to climb down vines and plants, getting what they want.

No one wants to exclude the public from enjoyment of flowers and vegetables, but it is often necessary to put up some barrier against trespassers who thoughtlessly or maliciously destroy in a short time the delicate work and care of many weeks. These fences or walls should be as beautiful as possible, designed to harmonize with the landscaping scheme of the garden itself.

SOUND DEADENERS

One way to deaden the sound when a house is built is to place panels of insulating material at all points where construction members come together, for example, a panel under each stud or under floor joists where they rest on their supports.

Then the floor should be floated. A floated floor is built this. Over the panels a pad of sound-deadening material is placed and nailed. Then floating strips are placed over each beam and nailed at about 24 in. intervals. A second pad may be put on or the finish floor may be placed directly over the strips.

Deadening under the fangs of the ceiling will also help.

One method to deaden partitions is to stagger the studs so that the ceiling has a direct connection between the walls of the two rooms. Sound-deadening material should then be woven between the backs of the studs.

I think I ought to know it, for the "Flying Dutchman," my dear dead partner, George Denny, taught me how to drink it once upon a time when Judge Schulze, Sam Alexander, Neddy Stafford, Charley Trousdale and I went a-drinking at Pucket's Lake. ## PLANS MADE FOR Y. W. C. A. DRIVE

ing; Mrs. Metcalf
Chairman

Plans were outlined at a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Young Women's Christian association for the holding of the fall drive which it was decided will be conducted on October 11. Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, treasurer of the board, will serve as chairman of the drive. Mrs. J. B. Kugler and Mrs. Frank Stubbs will serve with Mrs. Metcalf. Mrs. A. D. Tisdale, president of the board, and Mrs. Julia Marie Arnold, executive secretary, will assist the drive committee.

The past week has been a busy one at the "Y" with numerous committee and club meetings conducted.

The Blue Triangle club held a supper on Monday night and on Thursday the same group entertained at the home of Louise Phillips on Stone street, the occasion being a handkerchief shower for Mrs. Lois Gray, retiring secretary. Miss Gray is leaving for a year of study in Illinois.

The "Y" residence girls met Wednesday night for their regular tap dancing class. These are given each week on the same night from 8 to 10 p.m.

The residence club is planning a homecoming day for all former girls and all who at any time resided at the "Y" are to be invited to attend.

Mrs. Mattle H. Crow has just completed her first month as house matron.

TRANSPORTATION TO CENTER WORKED OUT

Dean C. C. Colvert, of Northeast Center of Louisiana State University, is working on plans to aid in every possible way in the transportation of students to and from college from cities and towns in this section.

He stated that there has been considerable interest shown in Bastrop and vicinity in the operation of a bus to Northeast Center during the coming term.

There is also interest in cities and towns east and south of Monroe in the matter of transportation to and from the college.

In past years buses have operated from Bastrop, Rayville, Delhi, Old and other places to bring students to college and to return them home at night.

The dean anticipated that there will be even a larger number to come back and forth this year than in past years. In order to work out a schedule, Dean Colvert asks that those interested notify him of their intentions and that the college will cooperate in every possible way to aid.

Indications are said to be for the enrollment of a larger number of students this fall than ever before at the local institution.

TWO BEER LICENSES REVOKED BY COUNCIL

Two licenses to sell beer which had been issued by the city of West Monroe, were revoked by the city council at the August meeting of that body held the past week. The licenses are those of A. C. Hicks and Luther Furrow. Both are located on Commerce street, West Monroe, and the action taken was said to be because patrons of both places have allegedly given the police much trouble. J. C. Cobb, chief of police of West Monroe, informed the council that repeated efforts have been required to suppress trouble arising at both establishments.

It was stated at the council meeting that other licenses may be revoked if further trouble is had by police in other cases.

Gly-Cas Unfailing; Man In Good Health Again; Stomach And Kidneys Functioning Normally—Aches And Pains Have Left His Body.

"I did not realize any medicine could accomplish as much as this new Gly-Cas has done for me," said Mr. G. C. Chambers, Route No. 5, Highway 155, Marshall, Tex. "For the past 12 years my kidneys annoyed me with night risings. It was an impossibility to get a good night's sleep. My back hurt so bad I could hardly stand it and I had such pain to run down into my right leg at times I thought they would surely kill me. I had also been badly constipated. Each meal I ate meant suffering afterwards with gas, bloating and sour stomach. My appetite finally failed completely and I would have weak, dizzy spells until I could hardly get around at all."

"But once I began Gly-Cas an opportunity to help me all my health troubles were soon brought to an end," said Mr. Chambers. "From the first few doses Gly-Cas gave me desired results and now I can truthfully say I have never felt better in my life. I eat any type foods I wish and they do not cause me any suffering afterwards. My kidneys are now regular, constipation corrected and I am a new man in every way it seems. The pastor's subject for the morning worship will be "Salvation" (Acts 16:30, 31). The evening subject: "Remember Jesus Christ" (2 Timothy 2:8). "There's a comfortable pew and a welcome for you."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Grammon at Catalpa Street; Ernest Duncan Holloway, Minister

Church school, 9:30 a. m. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father." (James 1:17.) Just after the feeding of the five thousand people, multitudes of men were drawn to our Lord, because they ate of the loaves and were filled. But Jesus could give them a greater gift than the meat that would perish. "Then Jesus said unto them: 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.' Then said they unto Him: 'Lord, evermore give us this bread.' And Jesus said unto them: 'I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth in me shall never thirst.' (John 6:32-35.) You are most cordially invited to meet with us this Sabbath morning to study His word. Morning worship, 11 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Bruce of Ferriard will bring the message. Kramer of Denver, Colo., will be with us. Brother Black will have charge of the music and it is expected that the evening women will here find hope and strength for the battle of life. Rev. J. M. Alford, pastor of the Gordon Avenue Methodist church, will occupy our pulpit on Sunday morning. Superintendent E. L. Boies will call Sunday school in session at 9:45 a.m. All enrolled members are expected to be present. All B. Y. P. U.'s to assemble at 6:45 p. m. Splendid interest is manifested in all departments, and we hope to be nearing the standard by the opening of school session. The pastor has returned after some weeks of absence during which he held revival services in other churches. Come, let us have a great congregation to greet him at both services of this Lord's day. Preparation is being made to begin a revised meeting with our church next Sunday. We anticipate this to be the most far-reaching and helpful meeting ever to be held here in our church and city. Not only is it true that we need a revival more than ever before, but the two evangelistic helpers engaged to work with us are outstanding men in their callings. They are men of character, skilled in their profession, renowned men who love souls and who are loved by all who know them. Rev. A. S. Newman, of Westlake, La., a native Louisianian, a graduate of Louisiana college, a doctor of theology from the Baptist Bible institute, has served Louisiana Baptist convention for years as one of the most helpful and effective of all our great constituency.

Professor Otis J. Thompson is a graduate of the board of trustees of the church, E. R. Dawson, chairman of the finance committee, M. W. Montgomery. The treasurer was able to report all bills paid and no summer deficit.

AFTER CAREFULLY EXAMINING THESE XRAYS OF CASES SUBMITTED TO ME, I HAVE SOME VERY INTERESTING INFORMATION.

IN THIS STACK OF FOURTEEN CASES OF ARMS BROKEN BY THE "KICK" OF AN AUTOMOBILE ENGINE, 12 ARE FAKES!

THIS ONE, FOR EXAMPLE - THE ARM HAS BEEN BROKEN ALL RIGHT - THERE'S NO DOUBT ABOUT THAT - BUT NOT BY A TRUCK MOTOR "KICKING" IT, AS THE REPORT SHOWS.

BUT HOW CAN YOU PROVE SUCH A THING?

BY THESE CHARTS

WHEN A CAR MOTOR "KICKS," THE CRANK IS HURLED COUNTER CLOCKWISE.

ON A "KICK" THE FOREARM WOULD BE HIT ON THE OUTSIDE, NOT ON THE INSIDE.

NOW TAKE A LOOK AT THIS X-RAY WITH THE REST OF THE ARM DRAWN OUT TO COMPLETE THE PICTURE.

THE BONE SPLINTERS SHOW THAT THE FORCE HITTING THIS MAN'S ARM STRUCK IT ON THE INSIDE. A THING UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE. -IF HE HAD BEEN STRUCK BY THE CRANK OF A KICKING MOTOR.

BIRTH OF THE
GOD
VINE

JEALOUS HERA, wife of Zeus, god of gods, saw her rival Semele come into her husband's favor. Determined to get rid of the intruder, Hera disguised herself, went to Thebes and there met Semele. Styling she won the confidence of the new mistress, and, knowing its fatal consequence, suggested that Semele test Zeus' love for her by revealing himself as the god of thunder.

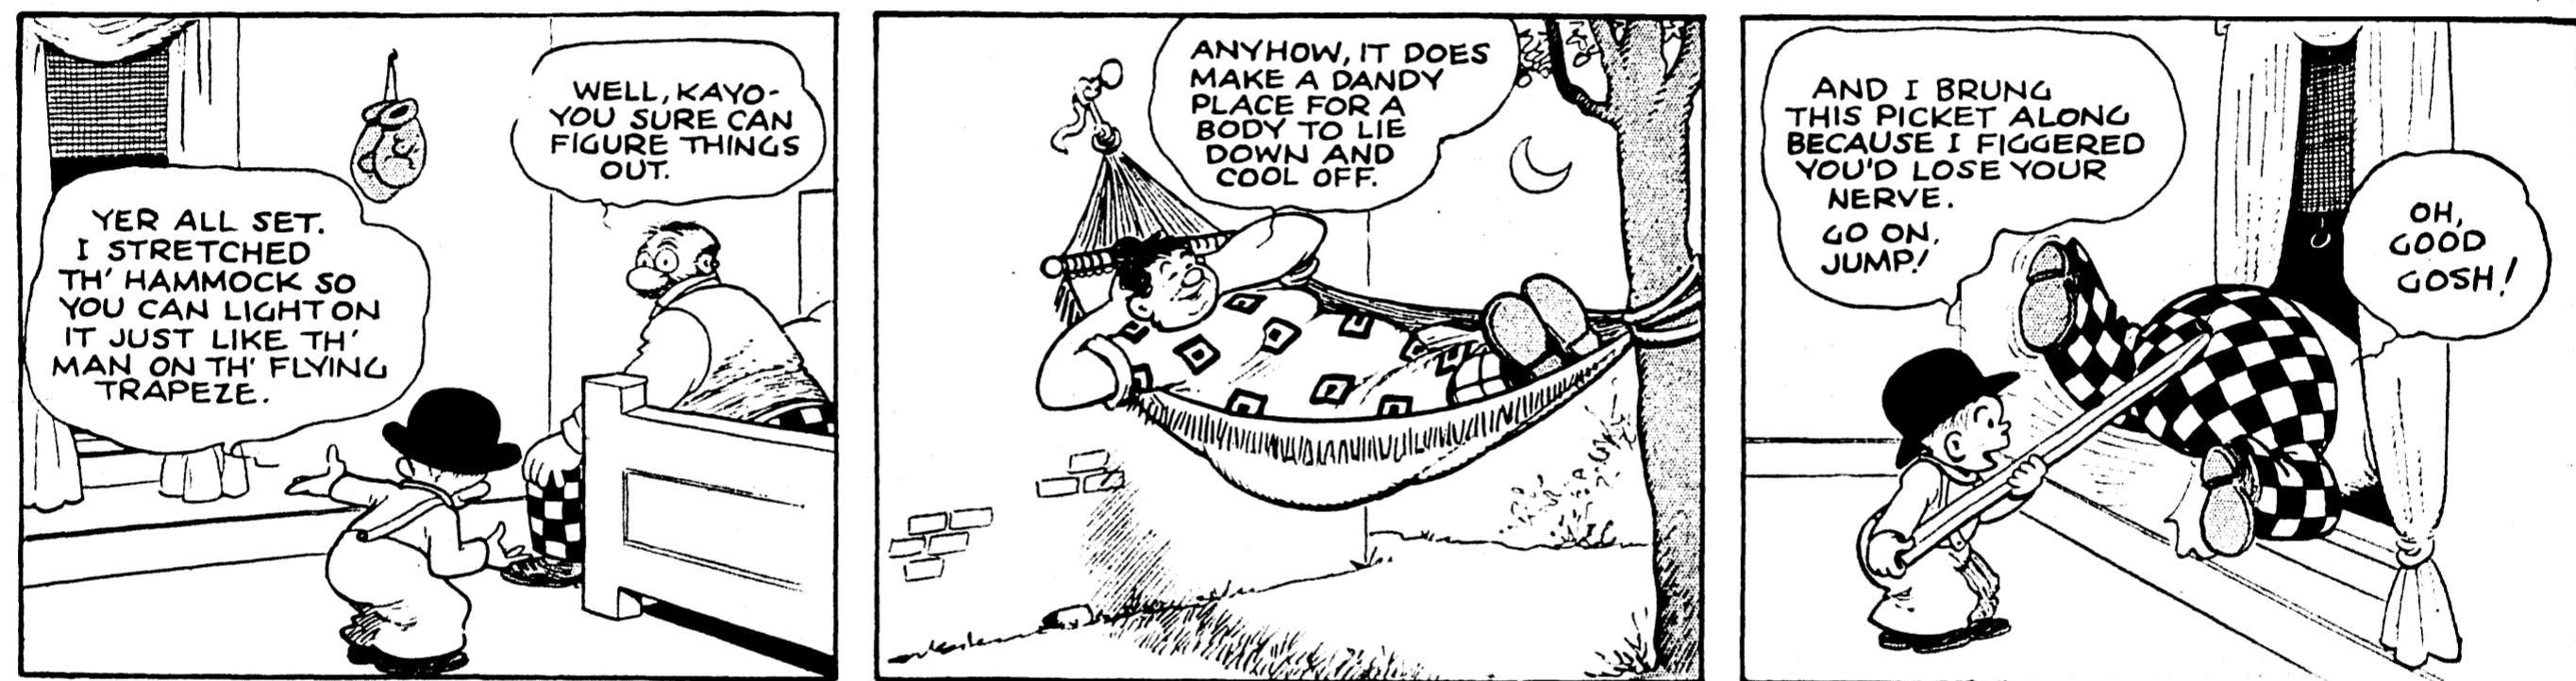

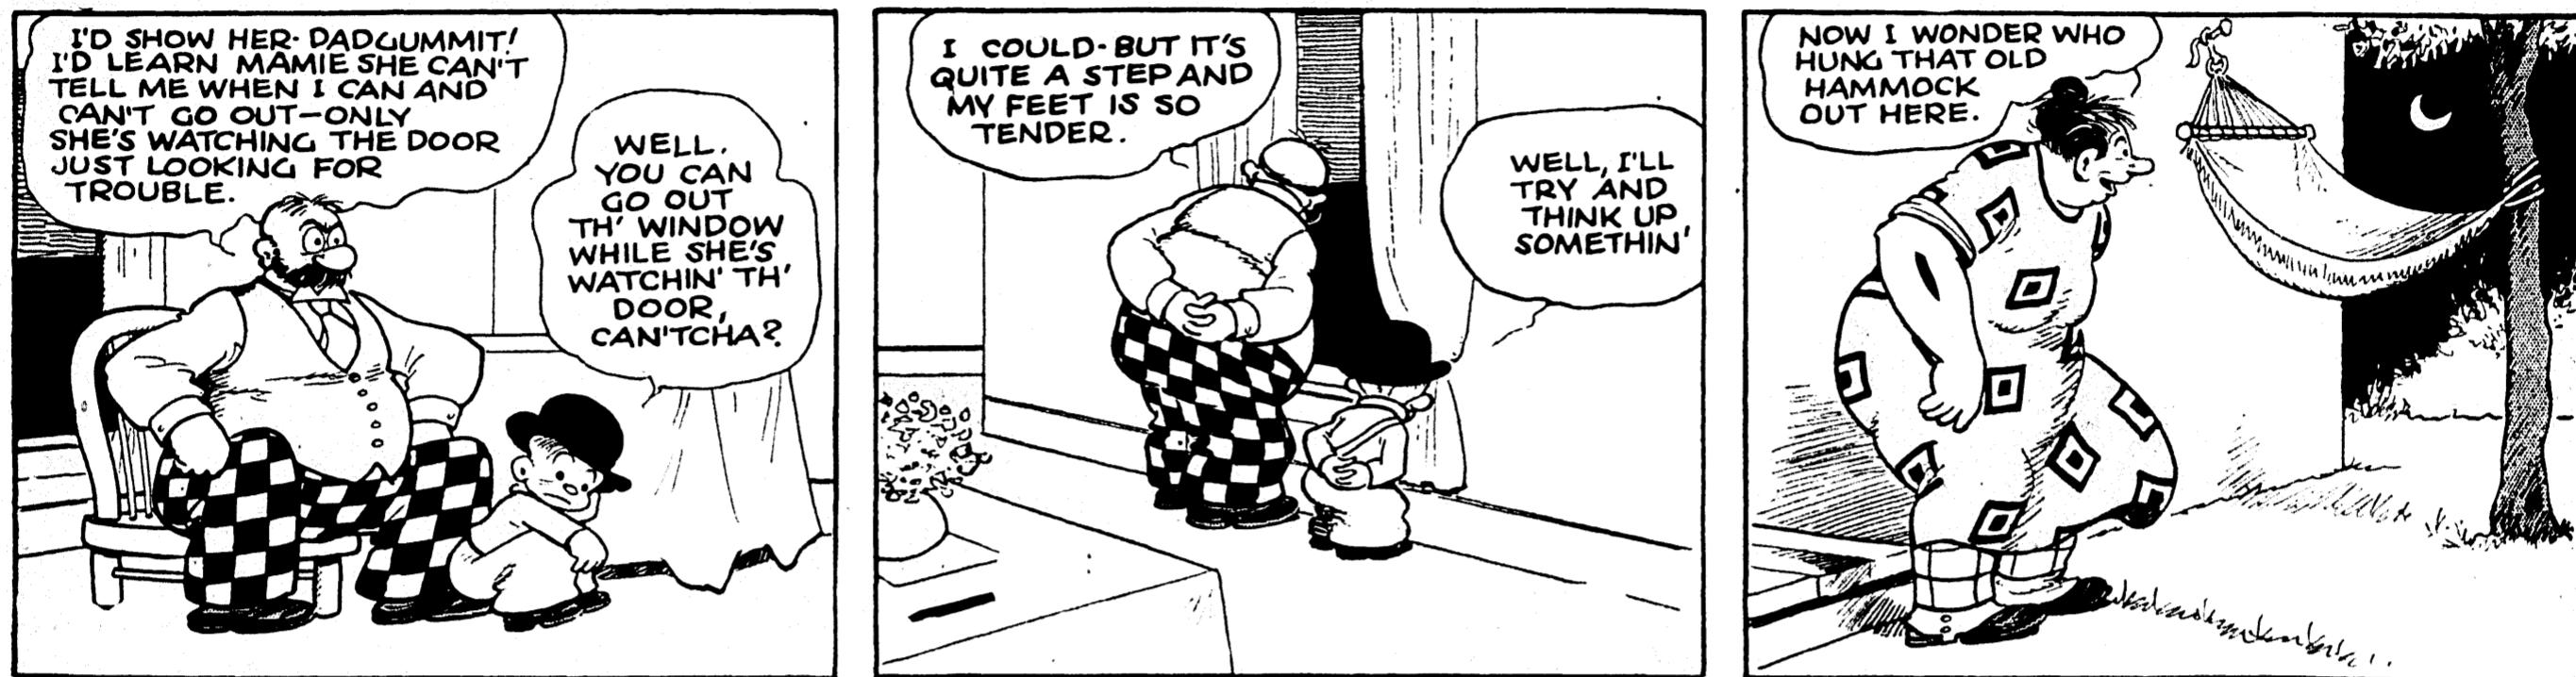

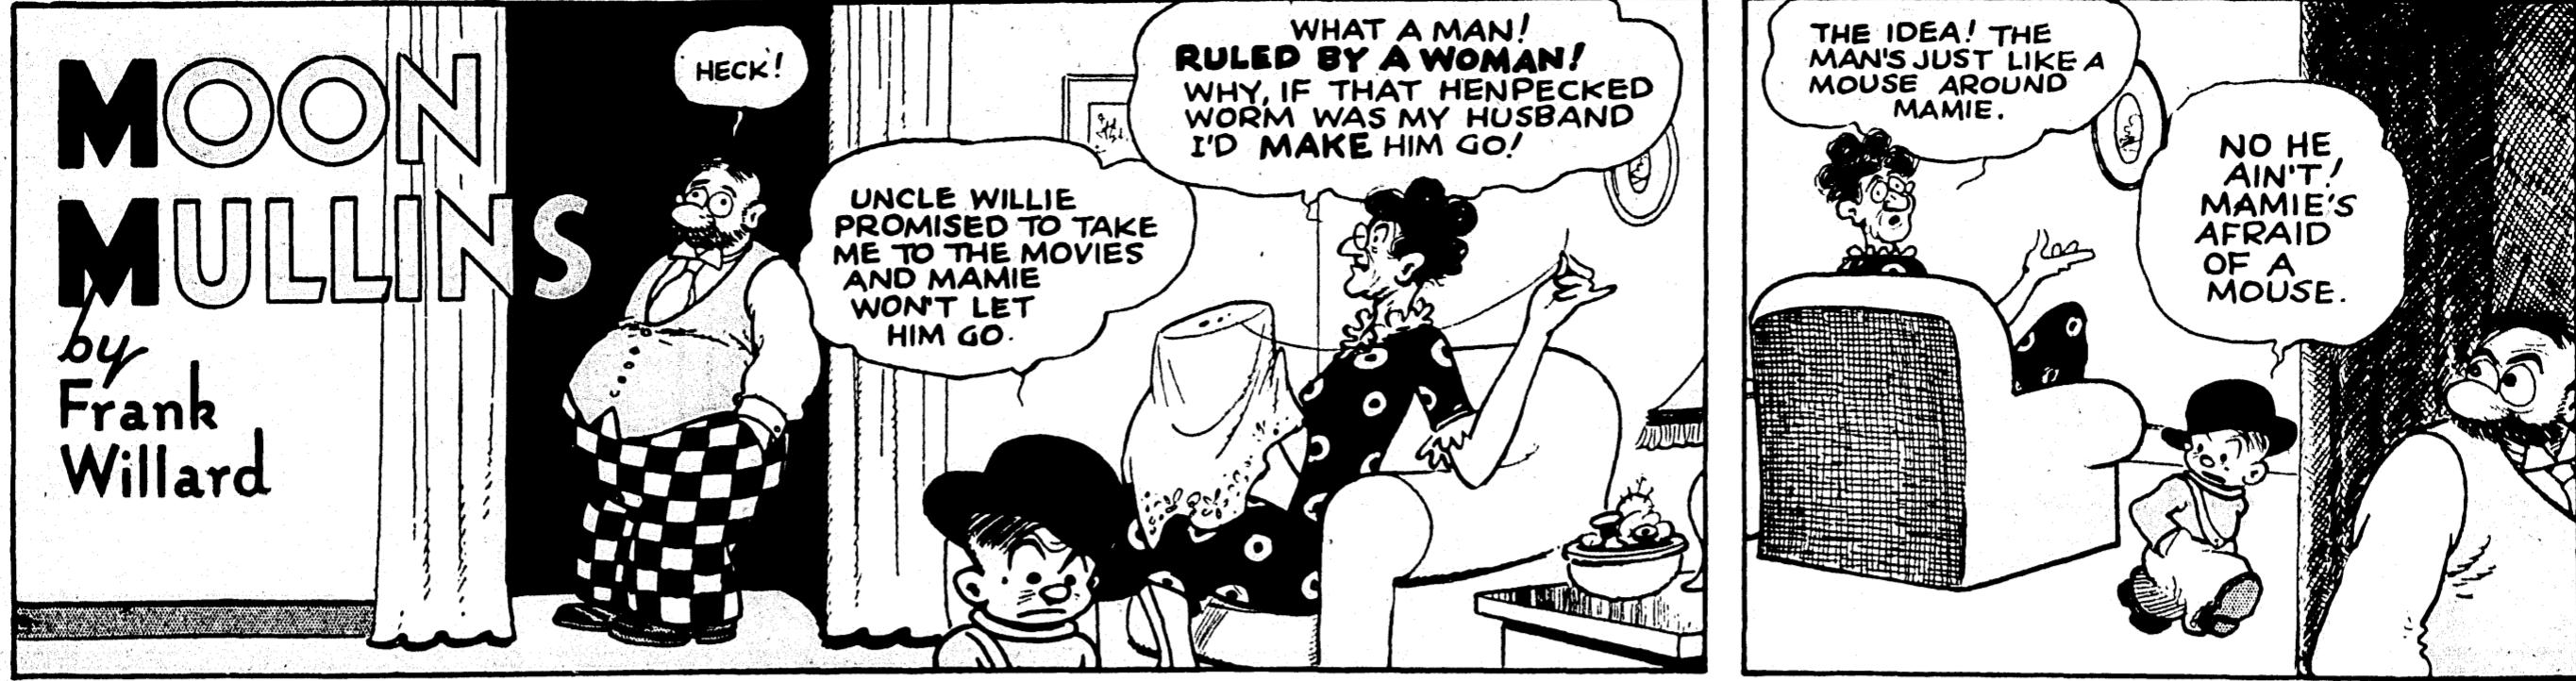

"By the dark waters of the Styx," Zeus promised Semele, he would grant her any favor she desired. When she asked what Hera had suggested, Zeus, reluctant and angry, had to fulfill his promise. He came to Semele in a brilliant display of lightning and a crash of thunder, and in the act Semele died.

At the moment of her death, Semele gave birth to a male child. It too was dead, but Zeus restored it to life. To prevent its torture under Hera, Hermes, messenger of the gods, secretly took the infant to Nysa, entrusting it to the nymphs.

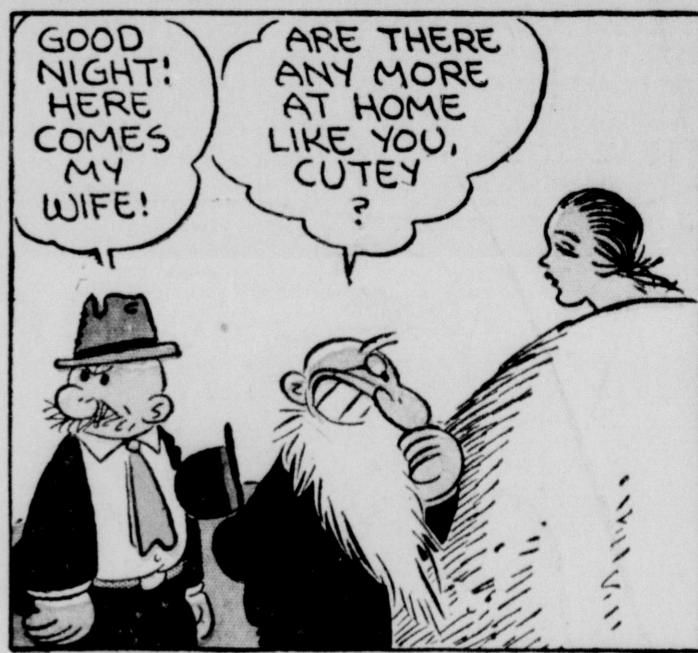

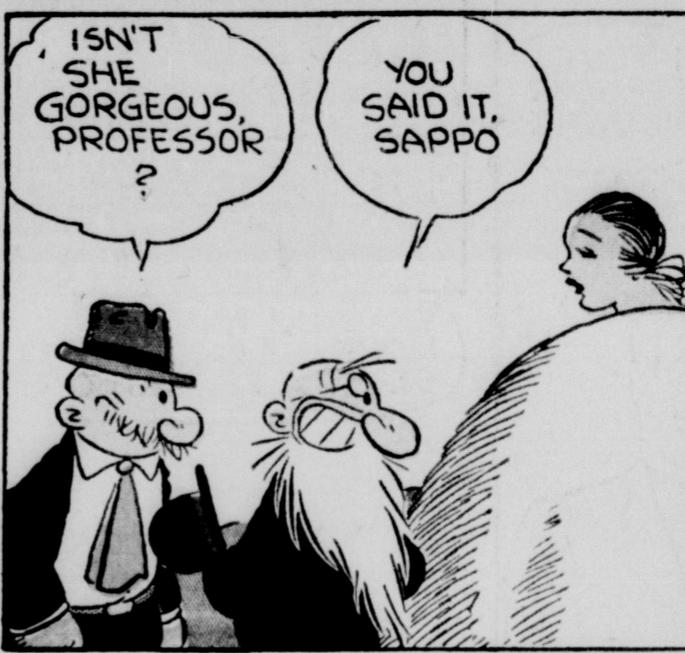

Thus was Dionysus (the Roman Bacchus) born. Given many names, the child grew up best as the god of the vine, of joy and revelry. He was known as Dithyrambus, which means "twice born," as Bromius, Lyaeus and by many other names. He has been represented in many forms of art. The story of his birth and his abduction by Hermes is illustrated on a Greek stamp of 1911, from a design found on a Cretan coin of the fourth century, B. C.

A political cartoon. On the left, a king with a crown and a pipe in his mouth says, "EVER HAVE I BEEN SO INSULTED! UNLESS THE DICTATOR INCREASED MY ALLOWANCE FOR RELINQUISHING THE THRONE, I THREATENED TO START A REVOLUTION — AND GUESS WHAT HAPPENED." On the right, a man in a suit and tie replies, "HE CUT OFF YOUR ALLOWANCE." The king has a pipe in his mouth and is gesturing with his hand. The man in the suit has his hand to his chin in a thinking pose.

A black and white comic strip panel. On the left, a train engine is shown emitting a large plume of smoke. The train is moving along a track. In the foreground, a person's arm and hand are visible, pointing towards the train. A speech bubble from the train contains the text: "I'LL SHOW THAT UPSTART! I'LL GO OVER THERE AND THROW HIM OUT OF OFFICE! I'LL PUNCH HIS NOSE! I'LL —". Another speech bubble from a character off-panel contains the text: "YOU AND WHO ELSE?". The background shows a simple landscape with utility poles and a building.
